THE MATTHEWS-NORTHRUP CO., COMPLETE ART-PRINTING WORKS, BUFFALO, N. Y.

YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY.

The years go by, and the decades pass,
And memories lengthen, no matter how green.
When was it, now, that that biggest class,
Bigger than any that yet had been,
Bigger than some that were still to be,—
So very much bigger than '78
And almost bigger than '83,—
Filed through the yard and the northern gate
And across the street for its proud A. B.?
When was it? When? Oh, yesterday.

"Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume, Labuntur anni"— well, what then?
What matters the score of years or more,
While youth is youth, and men are men;
The juice of the grape fresh pressed is good,
But better the wine that has kissed the wood;
Strong was the youth of yesterday,
Fuller the strength of the man to-day.

There's something that's known as your second wind,
You start your race and you run a bit,
But the day is hot and the course is long,
And the glare and the dust of it tax your grit,
And your feet grow chumpy, your breath comes hard;
But just as you wobble and almost fall,
Those lungs of yours that were pumping dry
Fill up again and you're good for it all.
We've held on, now, for our first full score,
But we've got our wind and we're fresh for more;
We've left the youth of the yesterday,
But we're young with the youth of to-day, to-day!

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the Class of 1879:

For five years I have had it in mind to get even with Walter Cary this summer! He prepared the last Class Report for me, as you will remember, and he would not allow me, in my own preface, more than the barest word of my appreciation and thanks, cutting out ruthlessly all that I wished to say. This report I have in my own hands again; but I find, as I look back now upon the finished work, that there has been so much of pleasure, as compared with the labor, that I should be loath to have given it up; and though I realize the work involved, I am feeling now that he owed me about as much as I (and the Class) owed him, and can the better understand his willingness to undertake this report also. And the words I have saved up for so long will remain unuttered, save for a hearty expression to him of the thanks of the Class for his work.

We are a very fine lot of men! I am thinking now not of our dignitaries, but of the rank and file. Anyone looking carefully through these pages, as I have had to do, will be struck with the amount of local civic work being done in their respective communities by the different men. And that is what counts most in making up the aggregate of the world's progress. We have our full measure also of celebrities — the President of Bowdoin University; two full professorships at Harvard, one at Tufts, and one at the Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago; the heads of three large preparatory schools (including Phillips Exeter Academy); the librarian of a great library (the John Crerar Library at Chicago); three philanthropists, who have given very large sums for public purposes; a Congressman (a Senator, lacking one vote; and a Governor, lacking 750!); an Overseer of the University; the Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, two judges, three or four railroad presidents, innumerable directors, a judge of the "Hall of Fame," the chairman of the Boston Metropolitan Park Commission, etc., etc. And surely no other class has ever had a Class Baby measuring six feet seven and a quarter inches!

The pictures in the report show for themselves. I would say for the photo-engravers (the Electric City Engraving Co.) that they labored under many disadvantages, the pictures being of all sizes and conditions,—two merely tintypes, two appearing only as figures in a group, and two or three being nothing more than newspaper cuts. I would say to the Class that they must excuse the crude shape in which many of the photographs (which had to be removed from their mounts) are returned. And I would say to other class secretaries that the pictures, in this size, do not add greatly to the expense of the report, and if only I had asked men to label their photographs, would have added hardly at all to the trouble. They seem to me to add greatly to the interest and value of the report, and would be interesting to have, I think, for each five-year period.

This report contains no illustrations of the new college buildings, as presumably each member of the Class takes the Harvard

Graduates' Magazine, and is kept fully informed there of all such changes.

The autobiographic form which I have used from the beginning in my reports, and which has become quite general, has advantages in accuracy, in readableness, and in the personal flavor which it imparts, but for men who are inclined to be modest it has serious drawbacks. It is much easier for the Secretary, however, as most of the letters go directly to the printer.

The last of our unfortunate railroad bonds (be it understood that I have never accepted any responsibility for the investment of our class funds, leaving this always to the class committee) were sold last September for $102.50. These have paid no interest since 1893, and cost us, in 1881, $2,332.00! It is always a satisfaction to me, when I look at the window we gave the college in 1882, to think that that $2,350.00 did not go into more of the same bonds, as it probably would have. We have now only a $2,000 six per cent. mortgage and the fund raised since last summer by the generous committee of which Sheldon is chairman, amounting to $2,632.00.

We have lost ten members by death in the last five years — Dalzell, F. H. Ellis, McDonald, Howard, Warren, A. C. Brown, Kinney, Poor, Goddard and Churchill. Four of these are since the preparation of this report was begun, and the sad news concerning Goddard and Churchill reaches me only this morning, after pages 9 to 140 are already printed, and with the report ready to send out in a day or two. Churchill's death was at the Isles of Shoals, July 29th, the end being sudden after six months' illness, with occasional slight improvements. Goddard died in New York July 25th, having recently returned from a European trip for health and rest.

We have gained one member, Schwartz having received his degree as of 1879 at commencement 1898, being the sixth man since we were graduated who has received a '79 A. B.,—one each in 1880, 1881, 1888, 1890, 1894 and 1898.

I have received many very pleasant personal letters in the preparation of this report. May I express my apologies, here, that they have so rarely been answered?

With best wishes to each and all of the Class,

Right truly,

FRANCIS ALMY,

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 31, 1900. Class Secretary.

[The account of Cook was received too late for insertion in its proper place, and will be found on page 111. The Secretary would like the addresses of C. J. Mason, Tappan and Wood.]

1879–1899.

Am I dreaming or rattled or half over seas?
What! Twenty years passed since we took our degrees!
It can't be; it must not; you're joking I know;
Say twelve years or fourteen, but twenty — oh no!

Why, don't you recall in the year seventy-nine
How the '59 men marched before us in line,
Bald, grizzled, and wrinkled, rheumatic and fat?
Will the Seniors to-morrow say we look like that?

'Tis true there are changes — this man at my right,
We stared blank at each other on meeting to-night;
'Twas his whiskers and waistband I marveled to see;
But why was he unable to recognize me?

I don't feel any older; do you? Let's agree
That we'll not think of age till the next century.
Twenty years! They don't know what they're talking about;
The almanac's wrong; tear it up; pitch it out!

Gaudeamus, bibamus et nunc, — let her go!
My Latin is lame, but it always was so.
Three cheers for the class that forever shall shine
Perennially young, — our own dear '79.

ALBERT CLINTON ALDRICH.

(Somerville, Mass., June 6.)—"Since 1895 I have been in Somerville, Mass., and continued in the practice of medicine.

"I have become a member of two clubs — University Club of Boston and Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead, Mass.

"My family has increased by one, Martha, now three years of age.

"I have been well all of the time and able to do plenty of hard work, which I enjoy.

"In all my affairs I have been fortunate. I have all the business I need, and the financial return still permits me to pay 100 cents on the dollar.

"It has been a comfortable and happy five years with me. I think I have made substantial progress."

Married in 1888: one son, one daughter.

HORACE CHAPIN ALGER.

(Sheridan, Wyo., June 1.)—"Residence and occupation [H. C. Alger & Co., General Real Estate and Loan and Insurance Business] as heretofore. Am still enjoying a life of single blessedness. Was elected to and served as a member of the Third Legislative Assembly of Wyoming in the year 1895; elected Mayor of my city for a second time spring of 1898, and ran as Democratic candidate for Governor of the State in the fall of same year, being defeated therefor by a plurality so small that a change of 750 votes would have secured my election. No literary work other than addresses."

Unmarried.

FRANCIS ALMY.

(Buffalo, June 11.)—In the spring of 1898 the house of W. H. Glenny, Sons & Co., of which firm I had been a member, withdrew from business. I spent the whole summer in a vacation, in various parts of Massachusetts, and during the following winter had no more engrossing occupation than in fitting a boy for Cornell. It was the first tutoring I had ever done, save for a very little one summer while in college, and as I had grown pretty rusty in most of the lines covered by the Cornell examinations, I had to work just about as hard as the boy did. The following Spring (March 28, 1899) I entered the employment of the Pan-American Exposition—continuing the tutoring, also, until June — as Purchasing Agent, with charge, also, of the Bureau of Printing and Supplies, and in this work I still continue. I can assure all who are interested that the Exposition will be an extensive and a very beautiful one, and much of the work I have found very interesting to come in contact with, the drawback being that by or before 1902 I shall need to find something else to take up.

I have resigned from the University Club and the Reform Club of New York, as my work does not now make them desirable for me. Have resigned also this spring from the secretaryship of the local Harvard Club here, which I have held for ten years. I remain Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Liberal Club — a monthly dining club of 300 members — which office I have held since the club was organized, in 1890.

The routine of my life remains about what it was five years ago. I continue to spend my summers at "Jericho;" my winters in Buffalo.

HARLAN PAGE AMEN.

(On Board Steamship "Westernland," June 27.) —"At the time of my last class letter I had just completed my sixteen years of service as instructor, principal, and proprietor of the Riverview Academy at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. In the spring of 1895 I was offered, and finally accepted, the position of Principal and Professor of the Phillips Exeter Academy. Although this position has brought to me much hard work and anxiety, I have not for one moment regretted the step I took in accepting it. Only about 100 boys intended to return to the Academy in the fall of 1895. We worked diligently during the summer and fall of 1895, and had the satisfaction of registering for the school year, 1895–'96, 191 boys. The number increased to 225 in 1896–'97, to 253 in 1897–'98, to 265 in 1898–'99, and to 289 in 1899–1900. This increase occurred, although a very large number of students (255) were in five years required to withdraw from the Academy. All students who were not properly prepared to do our work, or who, for any reason, were not profiting by their presence in the school, have been kindly, but uniformly, required to withdraw to other schools. We have by this somewhat heroic method created conditions at Exeter which make our life and work for instructors and students both pleasant and effective. About ninety per cent. of our students are preparing for college. The number of candidates for Harvard has grown from twelve to forty. This year we shall have from seventy-five to eighty candidates for the preliminary and final examinations. Nearly as many go to other colleges — the largest delegations to Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Williams, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"I haven't your circular letter of inquiries with me, and may not answer them all. My clubs are the University Clubs of New York and Boston. I am a member of a few educational and literary organizations; President of the Harvard Teachers' Association of New England and the Association of Academy Teachers of New Hampshire. Have published but one article, 'Is the Curriculum Crowded?' This recently appeared in the Educational Review. I am kept exceedingly busy with my ordinary school duties, and find little time to do anything else. I am sorry that I am so late with my letter.

"I am on my way to rest for the next two months in Switzerland and on the Mediterranean.

"A son, John Harlan, was born September 15, 1898."

Married in 1882: one son, three daughters.

CLEMENT WALKER ANDREWS.

(Chicago, June.) — "The account of five years ago stated that I had just been elected Librarian of The John Crerar Library of Chicago, and that the library at that time had three books, a staff of one, and no building. To-day it has on its shelves 60,000 volumes, occupies rooms with floor space of 15,000 square feet, and employs twenty-eight people. These two sentences contain the story of the greater part of my life for the past five years. The details are contained in the annual reports of the library, which I shall be pleased to send to any members of the class who are interested in the work of organization of a scientific reference library.

"Except for the change in work and residence, a serious illness in the fall of 1895, which delayed my coming here till November of that year, and a trip to Europe in 1897, the years have not been eventful to me personally. The change of residence, of course, has severed or loosened many ties and has led to the formation of many new ones, for some of the pleasantest of which I am indebted to my membership in the Harvard Club and the University Club. The trip to Europe was made to represent the library at the Second International Library Conference at London, in July, 1897, and at the Second International Bibliographical Conference at Brussels, in August, and was limited to parts of England and Scotland, Paris and Brussels. For the larger part of the time I was with a party of some sixty American librarians, who were received everywhere with the greatest cordiality and usually with much ceremony. The attentions paid to the London Conference were quite remarkable, including not only unusual opportunities for inspection of the treasures and methods of working of the great libraries of London, but also many social entertainments, including a special performance of the Merchant of Venice given for us by Sir Henry Irving and Miss Terry.

"Attendance at the annual conferences of the American Library Association has been one of the pleasantest of my duties, and has given me opportunities for seeing the country as well as of meeting and learning from those engaged in similar work. The conference of 1896 was at Cleveland with a post-conference trip to Mackinac, in 1897 at Philadelphia, just before leaving for Europe, in 1898 at Lakewood-on-Chautauqua, in 1899 at Atlanta with a post-conference trip to Lookout Mountain. This year it is to be at Montreal with a post-conference trip to the Saguenay. In 1898–99 I was one of the vice-presidents of the Association, and am now a member of the Council for the term 1899–1904. I have also done considerable committee work for the Association.

"The only other office of trust which I hold is that of Trustee of Unity Church, Chicago. I am not afraid, however, to match my list of societies and clubs against that of any other member of the class. Many of them, it is true, such as the National Educational Association and the Florida Horticultural Society, have been joined solely in behalf of the library, but the following are some of those which I personally use or attend: Harvard Club of Chicago (the first Chicago club which I joined), University Club, Union Club, Onwentsia Club of Lake Forest, Chicago Literary Club, Caxton Club, American Library Association, Chicago Library Club, International Bibliographical Institute, Bibliographical Society of Chicago, Unitarian Club of Chicago.

"I generally lunch at the University Club, dine and play whist at the Union Club, play golf twice a week, and occasionally live, during the summer months, at the Onwentsia Club; am editing for the Chicago Library Club a Union List of Periodicals in the Public Libraries of Chicago and Evanston, and attend with fair regularity the meetings of the others. A few social engagements fill most of the spare moments left by the ever-pressing work of the library, and with that complete the sketch of the routine of life asked for by our secretary."

Unmarried.

FRANCIS WAYLAND ANTHONY.

(Haverhill, Mass., May 28.)—"Same residence: 112 Main Street, Bradford District, Haverhill, Mass. Same occupation: physician and surgeon. Still on Visiting Staff of Hale Hospital, Haverhill. Am now Associate Medical Examiner of the district. Have done considerable work as expert witness in Superior and Supreme courts — work which I much enjoy. Written various medico-legal articles, particularly on the question of conscious suffering in cases where indemnity may be due. Have just been appointed by Wm. Moody a member of a commission to examine applicants for his appointment at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. If I drift in any special line, it is toward the medico-legal side of my profession.

"The class baby will be twenty in August, stands 6 feet 7¼ inches in his shoes, and weighs 190 lbs.; is employed in Boston, and I see him only once a week. Since he has grown up I welcomed all the more little Fred. S., who came to us April 13, 1896, and now, at four years of age, wears a five-year coat and seven-year trousers.

"Every year that I can get away finds me for a few weeks in 'God's country' — Northwestern Maine. I should be perfectly happy could I move Kingfield, Me., or Round Mountain Lake Camp, into the middle of Boston Common (air and all), and live there the year 'round; but since that is impossible, and Haverhill is pleased to keep me very busy, here I stay over eleven months of the year, and

'Shake hands with those who hasten on before,
And welcome comers through the open door.'"

Married in 1879: two sons.

HARRISON OTIS APTHORP.

(Milton, Mass., May 26.)—"I am still at Milton, giving most of my time and energy to school matters.

"It is hard to say what my chief interests outside are.

"I am much interested in Town affairs, being at present on the Executive Committee of the Trustees of the Milton Public Library, and have been doing a good deal to help modernize the library, which was out of date.

"I am also on the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Reform Club and President of the New England Cremation Society.

"I belong to the Union Club, Boston.

"I have no photograph, but will have an amateur one taken and send it."

Married in 1896: one son, one daughter.

EDWARD HERBERT ATHERTON.

(Roxbury, Mass., May 6.)—"Very little has happened to me in the past five years that will prove of interest to the class at large. I live in the same house, teach in the same school (Girls' Latin), grind away at the same old work, or what is as like it as one pea to another, and even go to the same spot on the coast of Maine every summer. About the only breaks in the monotony are when a class dinner takes place, or when some '79 fellow pays me a short visit. I have made no long journeys; someone, however, may be interested to know that I went to Washington, D. C., and to Quebec and up the Saguenay River in the summer of 1897.

"I am a member of the American Philological Association, the Appalachian Mountain Club, and various teachers' associations, but have held no position of trust or honor. I have, however, been using the little spare time I have had for two years past in the study of geology. I have already taken, under a professor of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, courses in mineralogy and lithology, and have passed examinations in the same; and I hope to be able to take the other two years of the course. Before I began this, I used up some of my spare time and energy in editing, for school use, some selections from Cæsar's Civil War, Book III., under the title, 'Cæsar and Pompey in Greece.' It appeared last autumn, and is published by Ginn & Co. I cannot say that I expect soon to retire on the income from it; but in every other way it has well repaid me the trouble and labor I expended on it."

Married in 1892: no children.

GEORGE DAVID AYERS.

(Boston, April 23.) — "Since I last wrote I have been busy in two things — my law practice and in the Universal Brotherhood (movement). The latter has taken much time that under other circumstances should have been reserved for law practice. But the work had to be done, and it came to me to do a part of it, and it had to take time. Now, however, only my evenings are taken up with the Universal Brotherhood, and I am pushing my practice as rapidly as possible.

"I have not written anything to speak of except articles not over my own signature for the Universal Brotherhood literature. I have lectured a great deal. In fact, I have been lecturing continually, a part of the time in and about Boston, and a part of the time in Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut.

"My wife died in January, 1896, and on the 18th of last November I was married to Miss Georgette Beatrice Guild of Boston. I am very happy in my marriage."

Has one son.

CHARLES WILLIAM BACON.

(New York, April 21.) — "I have not crowded many events into the last five years of my life. A part of the period was given to newspaper work on the Boston Herald and Providence News, the balance being put into law practice at Boston and, since January, 1899, at 11 Broadway and 71 Broadway in this city. Newspaper articles which died the day they appeared were my only publications. My family has had no additions and, happily, no losses in that period. No travels to speak of, unless I count sundry trips made last year to Utah and Nevada on law business. My permanent address is Natick, Mass."

Married in 1888: two sons.

HENRY BAILY.

(Boston, May 2.) — "Practicing law at 23 Court Street, Boston, and living in Newton. Daily routine about the same as described in our last report. Have been a member of the Newton city government five years. Am now President of the Board of Aldermen. This makes me a member of the School Board and Trustee of the Newton Cottage Hospital, ex-officio.

"I have also become an enthusiastic golfer. Golf clubs are numerous around Boston, and so I have abundant opportunities to enjoy the game."

Married in 1885: no children.

PETER TOWNSEND BARLOW.

(New York, April 19.)—"There is little to tell you of interest for the next report. In June, 1895, having been able to arrange my affairs, I went with my family through Canada to Vancouver, and thence to Japan, spending four months in that most interesting country; and then, by way of China, Singapore and Burma, to India; and thence, via Ceylon, through the Red Sea and the Suez Canal to Naples; then to Rome, Paris and London. We returned home in May, 1896, after a journey most satisfactory in every way. I settled down again to the practice of the law, and continued until last October, when I became Manager of the New York office of the Guardian Trust Company of Chicago. This seems to tell practically all.

"I send you the photograph, which please return. I am sorry that I have not a better one; but as this one makes me look somewhat younger than I now am, perhaps it is just as well."

Married in 1886: two sons.

WALDRON BATES.

(Boston, May 18.)—Is practising law in Boston, with office at 40 Water Street. Is a member of the Somerset and Athletic clubs of Boston, the Country Club of Brookline, and the Kebo Valley Club of Bar Harbor, Maine.

Unmarried.

EDMUND LINCOLN BAYLIES.

(New York, June 2.)—"There is little to tell about the past five years, save that they have passed happily and all too quickly.

"I have devoted most of my time and energy to the practice of the law, as a member of the firm of Carter & Ledyard.

"Each year I have taken a two months' holiday, which I have spent in Europe."

Married in 1887: no children.

SAMUEL CROCKER BENNETT.

(Boston, June 13.)—"My residence has not been changed since 1895. I still continue to live in Weston, Mass., where I have been a member of the School Committee for the past two years. My place of business is still in Boston, where I continue to practice law.

"For the past two years I have been Dean of the Boston University Law School. The seventh American edition of 'Benjamin on Sales,' published in 1899, was edited jointly by my father, the late Edmund H. Bennett, and myself. We were also associated as editors of the edition of 1892. No other legal work of mine has been published since 1895, although prior to that time I was one of the editors of 'The Federal Decisions,' and also one of the editors of the ninth American edition of 'Smith's Leading Cases.'

"I have traveled neither much nor far since 1895, but have been to England, Canada, New Brunswick and Newfoundland for a few weeks at a time during different vacation seasons.

"I am a member of the Union Club of Boston, and also the Massachusetts member of the General Council of the American Bar Association."

Married in 1885: three sons, two daughters.

AMOS BINNEY.

(Boston, Mass., May 18.)—"As I look back over the last five years I really am unable to find anything that would be of interest to the class. I have gone the same old round; no change in residence or business [real estate], no journeys, and nothing in the way of literature. I fear that all the 'copy' I can furnish is 'nothing to report.' My forehead is a trifle higher than it was five years ago, and that's all the change I know. The photograph enclosed is strictly 'up to date.'"

Married in 1885: no children.

GEORGE ASHTON BLACK.

(Gardner, Mass., June 5.)—"I am at a farmstead I bought in 1895, and call it 'Old Place.' I live four months of the twelve here; the rest in New York. I have no children, but am guardian to a girl of thirteen, who has been a member of my family since 1895. I have changed my city residence twice in the past five years, but am now settled, permanently, I hope, in sight of the Hudson, and close to Columbia University.

"The problem how to construct a Logic according to Kant's theory of knowledge, interests me, and I am doing what I can to solve it.

"Address is 621 West 113th Street, New York, N. Y."

Married in 1883.

CHARLES HIRAM BLOOD.

(Fitchburg, Mass., April 28.)—"Residence, Fitchburg, Mass. Lawyer.

"Married, 1898, December 22d, at Cambridge, Mass., E. Ravenel Almon of Halifax, N. S., daughter of Mather B. and Rebecca (Rand) Almon: no children.

"In 1896 was member and President of Common Council of Fitchburg. Member of House of Representatives from Fitchburg for years 1899 and 1900.

"Last summer went with Mrs. Blood to London and Paris, from June 3d to August 8th, inclusive. Hope to go again this summer."

JOHN TEMPLETON BOWEN.

(Boston, April 19.)—"In reply to your moving appeal: I am unmarried, and still engaged in the practice of medicine. I hold the positions of Physician for Diseases of the Skin at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Consultant at the Children's and Infants' hospitals, and am Instructor in Dermatology in Harvard University.

"My publications consist of various articles in medical journals and encyclopædias.

"I hope you are very well yourself, and prosperous. I always think of ourselves as about 21. Don't you?"

Unmarried.

ALBERT SIMON BRANDEIS.

(Louisville, Ky., May 30.)—Is practicing law in Louisville, with office at No. 80 Louisville Trust Building.

Was married, March 6, 1900, at Louisville, to Amy Thomas, daughter of George James Thomas and Asenath Dinwiddie McIntyre.

CHARLES OSMYN BREWSTER.

(New York, June 13.) — "Since 1895 I have continued to reside in New York, engaged in the practice of the law and devoting a considerable portion of my time to managing a railway property at Wheeling, West Virginia, of which I have been the President and Receiver.

"After my marriage in December last [December 7, 1899, at New Bedford, Mass., to Elizabeth Hathaway, daughter of Ellen Rodman Hathaway and the late Horatio Hathaway], I went abroad for three months, spending the time in Italy, and in Paris and London.

"I continue a member of the University and Harvard clubs, and of the Century Association, and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

"The photograph will be sent you soon."

FRANK BREWSTER.

(Boston, April 21.) —Is practising law in Boston, with office at 39 Court Street (room 19). House address, Glen Road, Jamaica Plain.

Unmarried.

FREDERIC MELANCTHON BRIGGS.

(Boston, April 23.) — "Since the last class report there have been a few changes for me. Four years ago I was appointed Assistant Professor of Clinical Surgery in the Tufts College Medical School, a new medical school established some seven years ago in Boston, and two years later I was given the full professorship in this department. My appointment to this chair has given me a great deal of work, but I have found this work extremely interesting.

"In addition to the clinical teaching, I have given three, and sometimes four, lectures a week on general surgery. The success of our school has fully demonstrated the fact that there was plenty of room for a new medical school in Boston, for each year has shown a marked increase in attendance, until this year we have 252 students, and find that we must build a very much larger school to accommodate all the applicants. Ground will shortly be broken for this new building on Huntington Avenue, and we hope to occupy it in another year.

"The only article that I have written since 1895 is a report of a case of contracted fingers due to burn, which I remedied by making a new palm for the hand, taking the skin from the abdomen and grafting it over.

"I have changed my residence, and my address now is No. 31 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston."

Married in 1893: no children.

ARTHUR ANDERSON BROOKS.

(Isle au Haut, Maine, June 10.) — "The last five years of my life have been a period of impaired health. In December, 1896, I resigned my pastorate of the Third Congregational Society in Greenfield, Mass., and removed from the town. My present residence is Boston during the winter and Isle au Haut, Me., during the summer. In company with my wife, I have made two considerable journeys during this interval; one to Jamaica, W. I., where we spent the winter of 1896–97, and the other to Europe in 1897–98, where we traveled for a year in Italy, Switzerland, France and England.

"I am not yet strong enough to practice my profession, and am still engaged in the endeavor, by one means or another, to recover my health.

"Address, Isle au Haut, Me."

Married in 1889: no children.

* ARTHUR CLARENCE BROWN.

Arthur Clarence Brown was born at Royalston, Mass., May 11, 1857, the son of Elisha P. Brown and A. A. French, who were married May 14, 1851. On his father's side, his ancestors, he says in his class life, are traceable back to Bartholomew Brown, who lived in Peabody, Mass., in 1745. His grandfather, Edward Brown, was a Universalist clergyman of considerable note in Vermont, and lived in Rochester.

Brown was educated at the Athol (Mass.) and Fitchburg high schools, the teachers who fitted him for college being Messrs. Clark and Bachelor, Ruel Baxter and Albert Williams. At Harvard he belonged to the K. N., Harvard Natural History Society, and Pi Eta.

He studied law immediately after graduating and was admitted to the bar in due course. He was then for a time employed in the legal department of the Fitchburg Railroad, a position which he resigned in order to go to New York and study for admission to the bar in that city. He was for a time in the office of Luther R. Marsh, and subsequently of Elliot F. Shepard. Upon being admitted to the bar he remained in practice in Elliot F. Shepard's office for a year or two, and then entered into some business enterprises in the Western States. He returned to New York a few years later and engaged in business there. At the time of his death he was employed in the Baltimore office of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company of New York. His death occurred at the Johns Hopkins' Hospital, Baltimore, on May 13, 1899.

HOWARD KINMONTH BROWN.

(Farmingham, Mass., April 19.)—"My present occupation and residence are the same as last reported, practicing law at 53 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., and residing at Farmingham, Mass.

"The routine of my life consists in daily trips to my office in the city in the morning and return at night, with regular attendance at open-air services on Sunday mornings and on such week-day afternoons as I think conducive to my spiritual and physical welfare."

Unmarried.

JOHN AUGUSTUS BROWN.

(Exeter, N. H., June 5.)—"Since our last report appeared, in 1895, I have lived quietly at my home in Exeter, N. H., engaged in the same duties as at that time [insurance]. In March, 1899, I was chosen Secretary and Treasurer of the Exeter Coöperative Bank.

"I have made no journeys and have written no books or magazine articles.

"The event that is of the greatest interest to me — and probably to my classmates — is my engagement to Miss Lillian Frances, daughter of Benjamin J. and Sarah (Gile) Perkins, of Exeter, N. H."

Was married, as above, June 26, 1900, at Exeter, N. H., by the Rev. George E. Street, pastor of Phillips Church of Exeter.

CHARLES CULP BURLINGHAM.

(New York, June 6.) — "No changes in vital statistics or in business. Firm name, Wing, Putnam & Burlingham. No new clubs. Member of Executive Committee of Association of Bar of City of New York: also of Civil Service Reform Association.

"I have been actively engaged in work in New York Public Schools since 1895, as Trustee, Inspector, and member of the Board of Education. I was appointed by Mayor Strong, in 1897, a member of the Board of Education of New York City, and under the new charter continued to serve as a member of the School Board for the boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx."

Married in 1883: two sons, one daughter.

ISAAC TUCKER BURR, JR.

(Boston, April 28.)—"My occupation is still that of a banker and broker, with offices at 53 State Street, Boston, and 7 Wall Street, New York. An occasional trip to foreign lands has afforded the best relaxation from business cares. One winter month I spent in Mexico, traveling on a special train with the president of the Mexican Central Railway. We journeyed by day only, stopping when and where we pleased, enjoying much Castilian hospitality, and viewing the country more thoroughly than is possible for travelers by regular trains. Our wanderings took us to the City of Mexico, and beyond to Vera Cruz and Cuernasaca. Another time I took my family abroad for a season, the bicycling in Normandy, Britanny and the Touraine proving the best part of our summer programme."

Married in 1882: two sons, two daughters.

GEORGE HENRY BURRILL.

(Claverack, N.Y., April 23.)—"I have no changes to report since 1895. I am still pastor of the Reformed Church here, and I have simply been doing the work of a country minister, and enjoying it. I find that the country has its social and religious problems as truly as the city. My effort has been to do what I could to make life in this community as healthful and as happy a life as possible. The only public offices I have held have been Vice President of the Village Library and Reading Room, and Trustee of the Claverack Academy."

Married in 1887: one daughter.

MIDDLETON SHOOLBRED BURRILL.

ARTHUR ASTOR CAREY.

(Cambridge, Mass., May 19.)—"We moved from Boston to Cambridge last November, so as to give our children the benefit of greater freedom of life and more space and air than it is possible to obtain in a large city. My occupation is the care of property and the furthering of various artistic interests. I am a Trustee of the Boston Art Museum, the Secretary of the Boston Art Commission, and the President of The Society of Arts and Crafts."

ROBERT PARKER CLAPP.

(Patras, Greece, May 11.) — "Your circular letter reached me at Rome a few days ago as I was leaving for Greece.

"I sailed from New York April 15th, with my wife, for a foreign trip of between three and four months, taking one of the North German Lloyd boats, which landed us in Naples April 28th. This is my first trip abroad. I am not exactly in the pursuit of health; for I was well when I left home. Still I felt the need of recreation. I have been a pretty steady worker in my profession, and out of it, ever since graduation; and although I have taken a so-called vacation every summer, varying from two to four weeks, I have not before partaken liberally of the genuine thing. Our route runs hence to Olympia; thence back here and to Athens; thence to Constantinople. From there we shall go to Vienna by rail about June 15th; expecting to sail on the 'Teutonic' from Liverpool for home August 1st. Our programme for the interval between those dates has not yet been made up. We like best to travel in such a way that we may shape our itinerary according to ideas which present themselves as we proceed. International complications will not, I trust, prevent the projected journey to the Turkish capital. In to-day's Patras papers I read (this is literally true, for I have lately been cramming Greek with this trip in view) that the American ambassador has renewed the President's demand of indemnity upon the Sultan, with a statement that if it shall not be acceded to an ultimatum (τελεοεοιγραφον) will be given.

"Excepting a few hours at Corfu yesterday, en route, I first set foot on Grecian soil this morning. There is little here to help one recall the glory of ancient Hellas. The town is dirty, and so are all the people and everything in it. Beautiful mountains, however, lift themselves in picturesque outlines around us, affording a foretaste of the natural scenery that awaits us. I purpose spending three or four weeks in the kingdom, and I shall not omit to 'do' with some thoroughness the more historic spots in and around Athens. One side trip will be to Mycenæ and another to Delphi. The weather ever since my departure from New York has been delightful, and the indications of to-day are equally promising. I have never had such an uninterrupted round of high pleasure and enjoyment as that which has attended us at Naples, Pompeii and Rome.

"As already indicated, I shall return to the routine of my law practice in Boston in the early part of August. In the autumn of 1894 I left the special service of the General Electric Company, whose law department had engrossed my attention for five years, and came back into general practice, joining Johnson (Benj. N.) of '78 and Underwood of '84. We are still together as a firm, our style being Johnson, Clapp & Underwood, 50 State Street, Boston.

"I live in Lexington, where I settled shortly before my marriage in 1886. I have always taken an active part in the affairs of the town. At present I am Chairman of the Board of Sewer Commissioners there. Except as I give time to local municipal and educational matters, my energies are devoted pretty closely to my professional work, in which I have attained, I think, a good degree of success.

"In closing this letter, written hastily while waiting for the southbound, slow-moving Olympian accommodation train, I want to add that, as the years go by, the ties which bind together the men of '79 seem to me to grow stronger and stronger ; and for one, I am heartily in favor of more frequent class dinners. Let them henceforward come every other year."

Married in 1886 : two sons, one daughter.

JOSEPH PETTEE COBB.

(Chicago, April 22.)—" I am still practicing medicine in Chicago. My college connections have not been changed since my last report, but are more exacting upon my time and impose more responsibility.

" Categorically stated, they are as follows :

" Senior Professor of Pædiatrics in Hahnemann Medical College.

" Clinical Professor of Diseases in Children, Hahnemann Hospital.

" Registrar of Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital of Chicago.

" Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association of Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital.

" For ten years I have been a regular attendant at the annual meeting of our national society, The American Institute of Homœopathy ; have served upon several sections and committees ; have been Chairman of the Section of Pædology, Secretary of the Section of Obstetrics ; and am at present Secretary of the Inter-Collegiate Committee of the Institute. Last year I was unanimously elected First Vice President of the Institute — the oldest national medical society in America.

" The routine of my life is that of a busy general practitioner in the city ; my special interests are in the line of medical education and especially in the effort to raise the standard of requirements for matriculation in and graduation from medical colleges.

" My travels have been limited during the last five years to trips into the country as vacation outings and attending various medical society meetings. The northern shore of Lake Superior has absorbed most of my off-duty time and efforts."

Married in 1882 : one son.

WILLIAM MERRITT CONANT.

(Boston, Mass., May 29.) — "In 1896 I changed my residence to No. 486 Commonwealth Avenue. I am still practicing the profession of medicine, and have devoted myself in the last five years almost entirely to surgery.

"This present year I was advanced from the position of Out-Patient Surgeon at the Massachusetts General Hospital to that of full Surgeon. My other appointments in medicine are as follows: Surgeon at the Carney Hospital, Surgeon at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Consulting Surgeon at the Charity Club Hospital, Morse Hospital at Natick, and Whidden Hospital at Everett. I am a member of the University Club and the Boston Athletic Association.

"I have written quite a number of scientific papers, and have read them before the different societies, but have not ventured to put any of them into print.

"My life for the last five years has been that of a busy practitioner of medicine, closely confined to his medical work. Aside from a yearly trip to the Harvard and Yale races, and a shooting trip to Maine in the fall, I am able to be away but very little."

Married in 1884: three sons, one daughter.

GEORGE FREDERICK COOK.

Has sent no reply since 1885.

JOHN TEMPLEMAN COOLIDGE, JR.

(Portsmouth, N. H., June 11.)—"My present occupation and residence are both unchanged since my last report, i.e., Boston in winter and Portsmouth in summer.

"My occupation is painting and work in connection with artistic undertakings in Boston.

"My fourth daughter, Elizabeth, was born at Portsmouth, N. H., on June 22, 1895. My wife died in Boston on February 12, 1900.

"My positions of 'honor and trust' have been modest ones. I still remain upon the Visiting Committee in the French department at Harvard. I served for eight years on the Examining Committee of the Society of Decorative Art, and for the last six years have been Secretary of the Committee in charge of the School of Drawing and Painting at the Museum of Fine Arts. Am one of the vice-presidents of the National Arts Club, and member of Advisory Committee from Massachusetts on the selection of pictures from the Paris Exposition of 1900. For the last three years Chairman of the Committee which provides exhibitions of paintings at the St. Botolph Club. I am also a member of the Art Students' Association Committee, which holds an annual exhibition at Copley Hall, the most important of which have been the portraits of women, the one hundred masterpieces, and the portraits of John S. Sargent. I am interested in the management of the Society of Arts and Crafts.

"The only clubs of which I am a member are the St. Botolph (of which I was secretary for three years), and Tavern, besides two clubs — the India Wharf Rats, who dine in an old 'counting-room' loft on India Wharf once a fortnight; and a club of Harvard fellows from '76, '77, and '79, who meet at dinner every month.

"My life has been quiet and commonplace; I prefer to wander along the wharves and old streets to taking my exercise in more fashionable quarters. My summers are spent at a quiet, retired spot, in an old colonial house, situated on Little Harbor, at Portsmouth, N. H., in which the children specially rejoice, and where they have become expert at sailing and riding and swimming.

"My journeys consist of a visit to Montreal in 1895, to see McLennan; and a journey to Gibraltar with Carey in 1896; thence to Granada, Cadiz, Seville, Madrid, Paris and London, which we struck in full season. Saw 'Persimmon' win the Derby; saw polo at Ranelagh; bicycled in Suffolk, when I revisited Woodbridge, where, as a boy, I spent two years at school. I found a few old friends there, after an absence of twenty-three years — among them the belle of the village (in '73), who was bending over her washtub, and now grown very fat. I should not have recognized her, but she remembered me.

"In 1899 I again made a journey to Canada, and spent a week with McLennan at Quebec in midwinter, a visit full of impressions and enjoyment. In the early days of December of the past winter I made a short journey to England and Scotland, spending a fortnight in the Orkneys and ten days in Paris before reaching home.

"My eldest daughter, Mary, is now nineteen. She passed her examination for Radcliffe last year. My second daughter is now presenting herself for examination for Radcliffe and Bryn Mawr; but neither of them will take the college course, as the first is following an artistic education and the second is devoting herself to the violin.

"In connection with Harvard, Mary took the part of Joas in Racine's 'Athalie,' which was performed at Sander's Theater in the winter of 1897. Of my boy, I will give an account in the next class report."

WILLIAM WILLIAMSON COOLIDGE.

(Boston, April 28.) — "My present occupation is the same as it has been for fifteen years. I have no children.

"I have delivered occasional lectures on my travels. I have made several trips abroad. Have been as far east as Constantinople, and have visited Norway, Sweden and Russia.

"I have served in the Common Council of Salem for four years, and am at present the President of that body. I am a member of the Republican City Committee, the University Club of Boston, the Harvard Club of New York, the Salem Club of Salem, the Salem Country Club of Peabody, and the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead.

"My address is 8 Carpenter Street, Salem, Mass."

Married in 1883.

GEORGE TODD COVERLY.

Has not been heard from since 1882. Address, Malden, Mass.

In 1895 the Secretary was informed that "he married a Miss Shepard, of Malden, Mass., some ten or twelve years ago."

JOHN ELLIOT COWDIN.

(New York, June 21.) — "Since last writing nothing of special interest has happened. In 1884 the firm of Johnson, Cowdin & Co. was started, and I have been a member of the firm since the beginning. As you know, we are silk manufacturers.

"I was in Europe in 1893 and again in 1897.

"I will try to send you a photo next week."

Married in 1885: two sons, one daughter.

WILMOT TOWNSEND COX.

(New York, May 28.)—"My office address is 16 Exchange Place, New York, where I am practicing law. My house address is 58 West 9th Street. I usually spend the summer at Mill Rock, near Oyster Bay, Long Island.

"I send you a photograph taken this year, and I am in hopes that the half tone reduced picture will be an improvement on the original.

"With all the will in the world, dear Almy, to write some account of my doings, I cannot find anything, save my marriage, that seems worth chronicling. During the next five years I will try to do something that you will like to record. I may write a novel; or, perhaps, I shall take a very interesting journey, in which case I shall not forget you. In the meantime I send to you, and to my friends in '79 — many of whom I have not seen for years, and I long for a sight of them — friendliest greetings."

Was married December 26, 1896, at New York, to Maria Duane Bleecker Miller.

FRANK LINDSAY CRAWFORD.

(New York, June 1.)—"I still reside at Summit, New Jersey, where I am likely to continue for some years to come, as I have committed the rashness of building a house there. I am still practicing law in New York City, but have changed my office to 37 Wall Street, where my brother and I continue our old partnership under the name of G. H. & F. L. Crawford. No changes have taken place in my family, either by way of births or deaths, since March, 1895; but my children have grown until they are almost as tall as their mother. I am glad to say that my health has been uniformly good, and that I am still able to do my quantum of hard work. I have really done nothing outside of my profession which merits notice; nor anything inside of it which does not pertain to the routine of a busy lawyer.

"I have held no office of any consequence. I belong to the Harvard Club of New York and to the Bar Association of this city; also to the Highland Club of Summit, of which I was for a time Governor. No degrees; no publications; no public service, 'military or otherwise.'

"My journeys have been confined to hurried trips to the West and South, taken for business purposes, and giving me but scanty opportunities for observation or information. Two trips through the South last winter, however, though they were brief, gave me a far clearer impression than I ever had before of the social, political and economic conditions of the South, as they now exist, and as they have been at different times during the last thirty-five years.

"You ask for any special interest which occupies me. My experience in this regard has been that, I suppose, of almost every family man. As I grow older my somewhat scanty leisure is largely occupied with those things which interest my children and with the children themselves. Apart from a fair amount of rather desultory reading, I have turned my attention to one pursuit after another which my children have been following, the general nature of these pursuits being determined by the fact that we live in a small suburb. For a year past we have been studying birds together, and have found a new pleasure in woods and fields through this study. I have had more or less to do with local politics, though never holding office. My efforts have been directed towards maintaining an intelligent and honest local government in the small city where I live, and I have had the pleasure of seeing some results from my efforts.

"I have no suitable photograph, but hope to be able to send you one in a few days."

Married in 1885: one son, two daughters.

ALVAH CROCKER.

(Fitchburgh, April 30.) — "Since 1895, as for the previous years, I have been actively engaged in my business of paper making.

"My firm, Crocker, Burbank & Co., enjoys a respectable place among the leading houses in the country in the manufacture of fine book papers and many other lines.

"While I have written no books, I have made it possible for my more learned brethren to publish a great deal of stuff, both good and bad. Sometimes I think the paper in the books of to-day deserve better things than the thoughts which are printed on it. However, the authors are my brothers, and I hope they will continue to write all they can.

"At forty-one years of age I find myself inclined to gray hair and a scant supply at that; but I will send my photograph in all humility, knowing there are others of our class who also show the trace of years."

Married in 1880: three sons, two daughters.

CHARLES SUMNER CROSMAN.

(Haverford P. O., Pa., May 22.)—"I am still at the old stand. Our school is in a most flourishing condition. A large addition for new laboratories and class-rooms was built last summer, and I recently purchased a beautifully wooded estate of thirteen acres near the school, for a boarding department, with a fine mansion house, large enough to accommodate thirty besides my own family. This seemed to meet the demands of the community, as I filled the house the first year. The beauties of the place can be rarely equaled, as a home for boys, this side of England.

"I enclose photograph as desired. My family remains the same: two girls and a boy, as stated in last report."

Married in 1885.

FRANCIS GEORGE CURTIS.

(West Newton, Mass., May 31.)—"I am living in West Newton, as I was at the last report, and my occupation is the same. I am a member of the American Public Health Association and the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, but hold no office in either. My only paper has been a short article on 'The Value of Hospital Treatment in Cases of Infectious Disease,' read before the latter society.

"I have taken no journeys, except two short hunting trips into Maine. I have not been married, nor had any increase in my family since 1895, and I am happy to say that no one immediately connected with me has died."

Married in 1887: three sons, one daughter.

LIVINGSTON CUSHING.

Is practicing law at Boston, with offices at 10 Tremont Street.

Married in 1882: no children.

*JOHN WHITNEY DALZELL.

John W. Dalzell died July 3, 1896, at North Falmouth, Mass., whither he had gone to recuperate after the close of the summer term of school. He needed but twenty-three days to complete his fortieth year. His final illness was of barely a fortnight's duration; but the story of the last ten years of his life is a pathetic narrative of courageous endeavor and untiring industry in the face of a relentless and insidious disease that caused him much suffering, and was sure to strike him down, none could say when. Knowing full well both the certainty and the uncertainty of his fate, he bore his terrible burden with the fortitude of a hero. The seeds of Bright's disease were the legacy left by scarlet fever in childhood. After the dread malady unmistakably asserted itself, some ten or eleven years ago, Dalzell became a changed man. His pluck never deserted him, but there was a reserve, an increasing seriousness, sometimes a sadness, in his demeanor that had been hitherto unknown. Always exceptionally industrious and time-saving, he roused himself to even greater efforts, and there is no doubt that he overtaxed his strength. His ambition for scholarship honors, his family responsibilities, the prompt payment of the debt incurred for his college education, and his duties as a citizen were objects that he never lost sight of. To those who knew him well and loved him, he could exhibit the old-time brightness, humor and vivacity that had so often won him friends; but the change in his character was beyond dispute. In Worcester, his final place of residence, he left a reputation for manliness, sincerity, high purpose, and grand attainments worthy of a Christian gentleman of Harvard training. In a city of such intellectual advancement it was no small success to be accepted as a very efficient educator of youth. It is an old saying, that if Dalzell could not get a boy into college there was no use for anybody else to try. Few men made better use than he of the advantages Alma Mater offered, and few achieved a more rapid or a sturdier development under her beneficent precepts.

John Whitney Dalzell was born at Waltham, Mass., July 26, 1856, and except a few years spent at Waddington, St. Lawrence County, New York (1858–65), and at Providence, R. I. (1866–71), he lived in the town of his birth till 1875, when he entered college, at the age of nineteen years. His great grandfather was one of those virile Scotchmen who fled from their native land to the north of Ireland, and are reckoned the progenitors of a hardy, indomitable race. Dalzell's grandfather came to this country in 1837, bringing nine children. James, one of the seven sons, was the father of our class mate. His mother, Ann Dewhurst Bowes, was born at New Orleans, La.

It appears that Dalzell had no thought of a college career till he had been in the Waltham High School for two years. Then the new principal, Mr. Minton Warren (now professor in Johns Hopkins University), recognized his natural gifts and persuaded him to fit himself for the higher education. The boy was graduated from the high school as valedictorian, and was started upon his college course with the financial assistance of his father's brothers, who lived at Waddington, N.Y. In his freshman year he received a detur of books, and, besides winning scholarships, he earned no inconsiderable income by tutoring other students. He was a hard worker, and, like many, though by no means all, hard workers, he was remarkably quick. Language was his favorite study, and the classics were his especial delight; but he did thoroughly whatever he undertook. He was appointed to write a disquisition at commencement, and, of course, was elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa. His fondness for athletic sports was very marked, and his body seemed as active, agile and vigorous as his mind. In the senior year he served awhile as substitute on the University baseball nine, but he had little time for making such pursuits a specialty. During the last three years of his course he roomed with Lancaster.

After graduation, Dalzell had intended to study at Harvard for a Ph. D. in philosophy, and then go to Germany to study. To earn a living and pay his college debt, however, necessarily demanded attention first. The year of 1879–80 he spent at Cambridge, tutoring and studying for his degree. In the fall of 1880 he became submaster of the Waltham High School, and he served in that capacity till October, 1883, when he removed to Cambridge, to fit a boy (John Jacob Astor) for college. At the same time he took a position in a private school in Boston. Subsequently, he helped to establish Miss Hersey's school for girls in Boston, being himself a part proprietor. During all these years he did an immense amount of general tutoring, and still persevered in studying for his degree as best he could. Social and political duties were not neglected, for he was a member of the University Club of Boston, the Tariff Reform Club, the Colonial Club of Cambridge, a Waltham Club, and various Masonic bodies.

In 1890 he bought a flourishing school for boys in Worcester, founded by Mr. Charles E. Fish, who had given it up in order to accept the principalship of Phillips Exeter Academy. Here Mr. Dalzell spent the remainder of his life, and accomplished his most important work. Of the twenty-five or thirty boys who from year to year were his pupils, nearly all went to Harvard, and many of them entered with honors of some sort. The master's influence over the boys was strong even outside of school hours. He was an expert athletic critic, and he could and did instruct his pupils on track and field as well as in the classroom. There is no doubt that this happy accomplishment added materially to the teacher's prestige and popularity. In 1895 he added a girls' school to the institution — thereby more than doubling the total number of pupils — and after an inevitable and severe encounter with the hard times of the last four years, he had placed the enterprise in a prosperous and promising position. It was then that death came suddenly.

Worcester is a very considerable educational center. Clark University, Holy Cross College, the Polytechnic Institute, Worcester Academy, Highland Academy and the private schools for girls, not only afford instruction to some 1,500 students outside of the two large public high schools, but they assemble a noteworthy company of educators (some of them of national, and even European, fame), and impart the savor of a university town. Dalzell's school is the youngest member of this academic family; but it seems to have become indispensable to the community, for it has survived the master's death, being still conducted by his brother-in-law, Mr. George A. Stearns, Jr. ('81), who for several years had been his partner. That alone is a monument to the usefulness of his life. Socially, Dalzell was highly esteemed in his adopted city, where, for two or three years, he served as Secretary of the Worcester Club. In that position he was characteristically energetic, and the handsome club-house is enriched with a goodly library of his originating and selecting.

On April 7, 1886, Dalzell married Helen Learoyd Stearns, daughter of George A. and Lucretia K. Stearns of Waltham. A daughter, Dorothy, was born June 28, 1887. Wife and daughter survive him, as do father and mother. His elder brother died hardly two years ago in California.

FRANK HERBERT DANIELS.

(New York, June 10.) — "Since the last report my medical work has occupied so much of my attention that I have had but little time for outside interests.

"My vacations have been spent in this country. Last summer I took a delightful trip through Newfoundland. This summer I have in view an automobile trip through New England.

"I am a member of the Harlem Board of Commerce, Trustee of the Harlem Club, and have lately become Senior Visiting Physician to the Hood Wright Hospital.

"My family remains the same as at last report.

"In March, 1898, I moved to my present house, which I hope will be a permanent location."

Married in 1887: one daughter.

SAMUEL DELANO.

(Boston, June 14.) — "I am to be found at 39 Newbury Street, Boston, engaged in the practice of medicine. No offices, etc.; no literary activity.

"I was at Camp Wycoff, Montauk Point, for three weeks as Acting Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A., during the Spanish war."

Unmarried.

WALTER DENIS DENÈGRE.

(Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., June 17.) — "Practicing law in New Orleans, as a member of the firm of Denègre, Blair & Denègre.

"Took an active part in Louisiana politics, in 1895, as a member of the Citizens' League, a reform organization which undertook to rid New Orleans of the scandalous city administration then in power, and succeeded in doing so by a majority of 10,000 votes in the election of April, 1896, and in installing a reputable and business administration. The chief benefits of this election were: a new city charter, the establishment of municipal civil service, a new constitution for the State, with the limitation of the franchise by an educational or property qualification, and the Australian ballot.

"At the request of the reform members of the Legislature, Denègre became a candidate for the United States Senate, and after a deadlock of two weeks, during which his faction prevented a Democratic caucus from being held, he received the sixty-seven votes necessary on that day to elect him U. S. Senator; but the presiding officer of the General Assembly, who belonged to the opposition, announced that he had received one vote short of a majority, instead of the majority of one which he actually received.

"A motion for another ballot was immediately made, but the Lieutenant-Governor, presiding, declared the General Assembly adjourned, by entertaining a motion that the Senate withdraw, and by ruling that solely members of the Senate could vote on that motion, instead of all members of the General Assembly, which had met in joint session. Denègre had a majority of the members of the House, the opposition had a majority of the Senate.

"Finding it impossible to reëlect its candidate, the then U. S. Senator, N. C. Blanchard, the opposition, with the aid of the State administration and its entire machinery, succeeded in forcing a Democratic caucus, which nominated S. D. McEnery, then a Justice of the Louisiana Supreme Court, and an ex-Governor of the State, and succeeded in electing him the following day by a majority of two.

"Denègre next took a leading part in the calling and holding of a special election in New Orleans, in May, 1899, for the imposition of a special tax assessment of one mill, to be dedicated and appropriated to the better drainage and the sewerage of that city. This movement was successful, and calls for an issue by the city of $14,000,000 of bonds, the proceeds of which be applied solely to drainage and sewerage, the preliminary work of which has begun.

"In the city election of November, 1899, Denègre again took an active part, joining in another campaign against the professional politicians and bosses; but the combination of the State and city machines proved too strong, the reform side being defeated; but only after having forced the political bosses to withdraw their objectionable candidates, and to nominate such men as had not been on their original slate.

"In 1898 Denègre became a member of the Board of Administrators of the Tulane University of Louisiana, having been elected by that Board to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice E. D. White of the United States Supreme Court.

"In March, 1900, Denègre was successfully operated on for appendicitis. He spends his winters in New Orleans and his summers at Manchester-by-the-Sea."

Married in 1893: one daughter.

FRANK DONALDSON.

(New York, May 20.)—"Was practicing medicine in New York when, shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish war, I was appointed Acting Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A., through the kindness of an old Harvard friend (Theodore Roosevelt). I was assigned to his regiment on my arrival at the front, before Santiago. Served with the Rough Riders until July 22d, when I was taken with yellow fever. After recovery, being too ill to rejoin the regiment, was ordered home on the transport 'Santiago,' and put in charge of a number of sick and convalescent officers, most of whom had been my companions in the yellow fever camp. These I attended at the quarantine station at Edgmont Key and until our arrival at Washington. Rejoined the Rough Riders at Montauk Point, August 15th, where I had charge of our regimental hospital. Was honorably discharged November 12, 1898.

"Was 'heartily commended' (for service) by Col. Roosevelt to President McKinley.

"After months of illness, as the result of yellow fever, was sent, in July, by the Surgeon General of the Marine Hospital Service, as an immune expert, to help in stamping out the epidemic of yellow fever at the Soldiers' Home, Fortress Monroe.

"In August was commissioned Assistant Surgeon, U. S. V., for service in the Philippines. After three months, was compelled to resign my commission on account of my health, which had been wretched since attack of yellow fever in the Santiago campaign. Was honorably discharged November 17, 1899.

"Was married, Juyl 20, 1896, to Ethel Chase Sprague, eldest daughter of Katharine Chase Sprague, and granddaughter of the late Chief Justice Chase. A son, Salmon Portland Chase, was born at San José, Cal., April 10, 1897."

HERBERT BEEMAN DOW.

(Boston, May 15.) — "I send you herewith a photograph of myself, taken within five years. I have nothing new to chronicle since I wrote you last. I still live in Woburn, Mass., going to Boston each day to my office, where I am in charge of the Actuarial Department of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company.

"My vacations have all been spent in New England, and the honors I have received, politically and socially, have all been of too local a character to be worthy of recital."

Married in 1883: one son, one daughter.

FRANCIS DE MAURICE DUNN.

(Needham, Mass., June 23.) — "I have but little to add to my report of 1895. In December last I completed thirteen consecutive years of service as teacher in the Boston Latin School. In considering whether or not I should avail myself of the provisions of the 'Act of the Legislature of Massachusetts, approved April 17, 1900, entitled An Act to provide for a Public School Teacher's Retirement Fund in the City of Boston,' I found that my work as a teacher has covered a period of twenty-three years — lacking seven years of the limit (30 years) when a teacher may be retired from active work with an annuity.

"Have been Chairman of the Needham School Committee continuously since my election to the board in 1896. Am one of the Trustees of the Public Library, Clerk and member of the Parish Committee of the First Congregational Unitarian Church. Have been connected with nearly all the educational interests of the town.

"I have but one child, Helen de Maurice, born in 1884. She is to take the preliminary examinations for Radcliffe College this year.

"I made one very interesting trip to Virginia, my wife's native State, with my family. Visited many places of historic interest."

Married in 1883: one daughter.

MOSES GRANT EDMANDS.

(Chestnut Hill, Mass., May 29.) — "For the last five years, nothing specially remarkable has disturbed the generally even tenor of my way. My business and other affairs keep me pretty busy.

"The summer vacations of 1895 and 1896 were delightfully spent with my family at the Overlook House on Kimball Hill, Whitefield, N. H. In the summers of 1897 and 1898 we occupied a bungalow at Duxbury, Mass. Delightful as a seaside resort. This and the neighboring town of Plymouth are particularly interesting for their historic significance. Reminded so vividly of the heroic struggles of the Pilgrim Fathers in founding a home upon our shores, we became imbued with their spirit, and could, with Mrs. Hemans, call it 'holy ground.' Last summer was a broken one, the sudden death of my mother sadly interfering with our plans. In September, a few days were spent at Chocorua, N. H. Recently I made a visit to Washington. In the House of Representatives, I was greatly interested in hearing the final debate and vote on the Porto Rico bill. In the Senate, I was fortunate in hearing a portion of Senator Hoar's three-hours' speech on the Philippines question. Whether agreeing with his statements or not, one could not fail to respect him for the lofty principles for which he contended.

"In April, 1899, we moved to our new home at Chestnut Hill — a more rural part of Brookline than our former location. My two daughters are fast becoming young ladies. Their scholarly attainments, thus far, are fully making up for their father's deficiencies"

Married in 1883: two daughters.

* FREDERICK HAMANT ELLIS.

Fred. Hamant Ellis was born at San Francisco, Cal., February 10, 1854, and died at Brookline, Mass., August 14, 1896. He was the second child of Moses Ellis, son of Seth Ellis of Medfield, Mass., and Martha Saunderson, daughter of Luther Saunderson of Boston.

Fred. lived in San Francisco until he was seven years old, when his family returned to Boston, and after living there two or three years moved to Framingham, Mass. He attended the public schools of the town for a few years, and then fitted for college at St. Mark's School, Southboro, and New Church School, Waltham, with a final year at Adams Academy, Quincy. After finishing the college course he attended the Harvard Law School for two years, and then entered as a student the law office of Myers & Warner in Boston. He was admitted to the bar in December, 1882, and soon after his admission opened an office in Boston, in which city he continued the practice of his profession until early in 1889, when he was compelled, by failing health, to give up all work. On June 21st, 1888, he married Eva, daughter of Abiel S. and Eliza (Upham) Lewis of Framingham, who survives him.

Fred. was extremely practical in his ideas. He had little love for, and often begrudged the time spent on, studies which did not seem to him to have a direct bearing on the practical side of life. He had, however, a strong interest in the affairs of the day, was a keen observer and a constant and general reader, so that when he left college he had acquired a larger fund of general information than most fellows of his age. This practical side of his character was noticeable in his study of law. He cared little for its theories or for tracing its historical development. He did not care to become, and was not, "learned in the law"; but he did acquire a good working knowledge of it, which, coupled with his keen powers of observation and unusually large fund of common sense, made him a valuable counselor in business affairs, and, if his health had not broken down, would have secured to him a large and lucrative practice in that branch of his profession. He had a very sociable disposition and was always ready to make new friends or welcome old ones. His quiet, genial manner, dry humor, and shrewd comments on men and events, made him a delightful companion at all times. He was a staunch friend. One who could always be relied on for advice, sympathy and assistance in trouble or distress. In short, Fred. belonged to that class of quiet, unassuming men whose ever-present geniality, sympathy and helpfulness becomes looked upon so much as a matter of course that it is not until they are gone that we appreciate their true worth.

RALPH WATERBURY ELLIS.

(Springfield, Mass., May 26.)—"I beg your pardon for keeping you waiting until the last call for the dining car. The fact is that your letter asking for my life scattered my wits so thoroughly that I couldn't get even a mercantile agency to take the job of collecting them, and I don't attend to collections myself.

"I can't write anything that will be news about myself, for I have succeeded in bribing the toast-master at every dinner since we graduated to let me make a few unpremeditated remarks. Some may have wondered how it happened that there have been so many rich toast-masters and poor speakers at the dinners, and if I have let out a secret, don't print this.

"I thought, when I wrote five years ago, that I was out of politics for good; but a local whirlpool caught me, and I served in the Springfield City Council in 1896–97–98. I hope I have now graduated as an office-holder, although I still expect to attend caucuses and conventions religiously.

"I have dropped a few useless club affiliations, and the only new ones I have contracted are with the Nayasset Club, the Connecticut Valley Harvard Club, which I helped organize and am now President of, and the Springfield Country Club, which I used to play golf with. I am just learning the game, which consists in knocking a little ball off somewhere where you can't find it; and I have made the discovery that a near-sighted man has a great advantage in being able to lose his ball in places where a man with good eyes can't do it.

"The only child that has arrived in my family since last report, reached here May 3, 1896, and was found to be tagged 'Ralph W. Ellis, Jr.'

"My only travels lately have consisted in short trips South for rest each winter, Nassau being the most remote."

Married in 1882: two sons.

GEORGE FAUNCE.

(Pittsburg, Pa., April 30.)—"My occupation until February 28, 1898, was Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Lead Company. Owing to the sudden illness of the president, the company, although entirely solvent, was placed in receivership, and the works were shut down. The succeeding three months I was employed by M. Guggenheim's Sons on special work at their refinery in Perth Amboy, N. J. During four months in the fall and winter of 1898 I sojourned in Salt Lake City, looking after the interests of our company at their smelter. I returned home about February 1, 1899, and enjoyed a few months of leisure. In June, 1899, the Pennsylvania Smelting Company was organized, with myself as President and Manager. A new plant was erected at Carnegie, which started only a short time ago. Consequently, the routine of my life is now almost entirely comprised in hustling for the new concern.

"I have to record the birth of a daughter, Margaret, on January 14, 1898, at Carnegie, Pa."

Married in 1884: one son, three daughters.

EDGAR CONWAY FELTON.

(Philadelphia, Pa., May.)—"Each five-year period finds me with less of interest to write about. I am still working for the Pennsylvania Steel Co., as I have been ever since I left college. In the spring of 1896 I was elected President of the company. I continued to live in Steelton, at the works there, until last October, when I moved to Philadelphia, where I am now living. Our works at Steelton and at Sparrow's Point, near Baltimore, are now employing about 10,000 men, and have, I think, done more to develop the business of exporting steel rails than any other American establishment. The largest contract we have received for export is from the Russian Government, for the Trans-Siberian Railway. On this order rails enough to lay more than 1,100 miles of track were shipped directly from our works by vessel to Vladivostok, Siberia, and Port Arthur in Manchuria. We have also in the last three years sent rails to Norway, Hindustan, British Burma, Japan, Australia, South Africa, to the various countries of South America, and, most satisfactory of all, to England, Scotland and Ireland.

"The development of the bridge building part of our business has interested me very much. In the last five years we have built a fair share of the important steel structures in the United States, including the steel arch bridge across the Gorge at Niagara, the train sheds of the Northern and Southern Terminal Stations at Boston, a good part of the Boston Subway, and last, but not least, the Base-ball Cage on Soldiers' Field. There are now forty good Americans in the borderland between British Burma and China, 'on the road to Mandalay' and beyond, erecting a large viaduct which we are building there for the state railways of Burma.

"In common with the rest of America, I followed with intense interest the fortunes of our soldiers and sailors in Cuba in 1898. The campaign about Santiago was especially interesting to me, for the principal landing of the American troops was made at our mining town of Siboney, and Las Guasimas, where Roosevelt and the Rough Riders received their baptism of fire, is in plain view of our iron mines. I have been in Santiago once since the war, and, knowing the old town well under its former rulers, and seeing with my own eyes the marvels wrought by the Americans in their brief sojourn there, I came home proud of my countrymen. I don't think the Cubans appreciate at all what is being done for them, and believe that when we retire from the island matters will go back into a worse state than under the Spanish régime.

"I am a director in several manufacturing and mining companies, and in electric railways and banks, but a catalogue of them would take time to prepare and would not interest the class. The same, I think, applies to clubs. I have written no books, and don't intend to."

Married in 1884: four sons, two daughters.

JAMES ARTHUR GAGE.

(Lowell, May 30.)—"A doctor can seldom report 'changes.' His life embodies the idea of fixedness, both in purpose and in achievement. His congregation never asks him to resign, and his constituents do not elect him to Congress, consequently, his present occupation is both his past and future, and his residence is always in the midst of those he serves early and late. Often the same patient horse carries him about year after year, until he, too, seems to be a fixture that defies time and change. Even the blessing of wife and children may not interrupt his devotion to his life-work. Possibly this may suggest a monotony of existence, and a limiting of the mental horizon; but assuredly there is no monotony in the search for scientific truth, and the horizon is as wide as the possibilities of the future. To produce and apply the Roentgen Rays to surgery, to report 'Some Considerations of Tuberculosis' from fifteen years of study, to apply the modern principles of surgery to the relief of human suffering, furnishes an inspiration to life and a stimulus to still better work. But the doctor's life is not all work. He realizes the benefit of relaxation and pleasure, and the elevating influence of out-door sports. He can help to guide the destinies of his local country club, and even try to keep his own muscles supple with the mashie and the cleek. And when the enervating days of August come he may lay aside all responsibilities and go to seek the wary ouananiche 'at the sign of the balsam bough.' Did I say there were no changes? I was wrong, as you will perceive when you look at the picture I send you, but they are the changes that come from five years of progress."

Unmarried.

CHARLES WILLIAM GALLOUPE.

(Boston, Mass., June 22.)—"I have as yet no child, no wife, no home. I still reside at 188 Commonwealth Avenue, where I practice general medicine, although my work for the past few years has been, in great measure, examination of plaintiffs in suits for damages, and expert testimony in accident cases. In this capacity I have learned the cash value of Schofield's eloquence before a jury.

"In the summer of 1896 I accompanied the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., as Assistant Surgeon, on its memorable visit to England. We sailed on the 'Servia,' June 29th, and celebrated the Glorious Fourth in midocean in fitting style. The courtesies extended to us in London were fully described in the daily papers at the time. Suffice it to say, that no visiting organization has ever been so honored before or since. Our entertainments included a reception by the Queen at Windsor, a garden party by the Prince of Wales at Marlborough House, a review of the 30,000 troops at Aldershot, banquets at the Royal Artillery Mess at Woolwich, and the Fishmongers' Guild (the oldest in London), as well as at armories and hotels. There is no question but that the fraternity developed by this visit had much to do with England's frank expression of sympathy with us during the Spanish War. I had the pleasure of meeting many eminent military men, including Lord Wolseley, and others whose names have since become prominent in the Boer War, particularly Lord Methuen and Sir Redvers Buller. My impression at the time was that the military system of England was a vast social organization, over-ridden by forms and conventionalities; where individual ability and power were suppressed by custom and precedent. Some incidents of the South African War have since demonstrated this defect. After this arduous tour of duty (whose functions occupied twenty-four hours a day) I sailed north with my two traveling companions of previous years. We penetrated the more interesting fjords of Norway in the little coastwise steamers, supporting life on a uniform diet of bread and cheese — and salmon. Through some of these fjords the passage for the ship was scarce a hundred feet in width, while, on either side, the mountains rose almost vertically a height of 3,000 feet. We drove across the mountains from Gudwangen to Christiania, stopping at the government posting stations, and always finding cheese and salmon. This ride was a revelation to me of the grandeur of waterfalls and mountains. We came to rest at last at Stockholm, the 'Venice of the North,' with its canals, and gardens, and music, and excellent food, and 'punsch' — an alluring and insidious beverage, quite irresistible when brought in a cooler, but regrettable, sometimes, the morning after. The voyage up the Baltic to St. Petersburg, with a stop at Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, gave a restful interlude. St. Petersburg, Moscow, and Nijni Novgorod were intensely interesting to me. No country can equal Russia in the splendor of its churches and the wealth of art in its palaces. A Pan-Russian exhibition at Nijni, in addition to the annual fair, convinced me that Russia can supply nearly everything on earth in mining, agriculture, machinery, furs, and textile products, as well as unique works of art in enamel. The Trans-Siberian Railroad will soon bring these products to open market, and we may expect in the next century to see Russia, with its unlimited wealth and teeming population, become the ruling power in the Eastern Hemisphere, as the United States will be in the Western. A short rest at Berlin, and a brief visit to Copenhagen, completed my trip, and I returned home on the 'Campania,' September 5th.

"Since 1896 I have been constantly in Boston, with the exception of summer trips to the woods of New Hampshire, Maine, and Canada, for fish and game. I have resigned from some societies and joined others, so that I think my score stands about even. My principal clubs are the University, Country, Algonquin and Athletic. I was one of the founders of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in Massachusetts, and have joined the Harvard Musical, and several fish and game associations. I resigned from the Ancients in 1898, and was honorably discharged from the militia in 1895. I was very anxious to accompany one of the Massachusetts regiments during the Spanish War, but found that even medical appointments were not determined by experience or proper qualifications, but by personal interest and political bargaining.

"I think I have written only one article for publication, a letter in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, descriptive of the great Foundling Hospital at Moscow, a unique institution, of especial interest to the sociologist and the medical man. In Masonry, I have advanced to the chair of S. W., and take great interest in the subject."

WARREN NORTON GODDARD.

No change since 1895. Is a member of the firm of J. W. Goddard & Sons, New York. Is now abroad. The picture is from a book published in 1897, on the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the firm.

HERMON WHEATON GRANNIS.

(New York, April 21.)— "Since our latest report was published, I have been with Scribner's Magazine, 153 Fifth Avenue, New York. I represent the advertising department of the magazine, and find the work very congenial. I reside in New York. Am still unmarried, with no prospects in this direction so far as I can see. Am a member of the Harvard Club of New York; of the Apawamis Club of Rye, N. Y.; and of the Fairfield County Golf Club of Greenwich, Conn. Permanent address, 27 West 44th Street, New York City."

Unmarried.

EDWARD HALE.

(Cambridge, Mass., May 25.)—"At the time of our last report I was minister of the First Unitarian Church in Orange, N. J. I also had work as assistant in homiletics at the Harvard Divinity School, which took me to Cambridge once a fortnight during the college year.

"In the spring of 1897 I was appointed Assistant Professor of Homiletics in the Divinity School. I resigned from the ministry of my church in Orange and removed to Cambridge in July. During the summer of 1897 I edited the Christian Register, a Unitarian paper published in Boston. In addition to my work in the Divinity School I have been, since October, 1897, minister in charge of the Chestnut Hill Society, at Chestnut Hill, in the town of Newton. During the college year 1898–99, in the absence of Professor F. G. Peabody, I had charge of the arrangements for Appleton Chapel.

"I am a member of the Cambridge Civil Service Reform Association, the Massachusetts Civil League, the New England Free Trade League, the Indian Rights Association; also, of the American Historical Association, and of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts; I am a Director of the Associated Charities of Cambridge and President of one of the Ward Conferences, and a Vice President of the New England Association of the Alumni of Phillips Exeter Academy.

"My second child, William Peabody, was born in East Orange, N. J., July 26, 1895. He died at Cambridge, July 21, 1897. My address is 1 Bond Street, Cambridge, Mass.'

Married in 1889.

CHARLES STEDMAN HANKS.

(Boston, April 26.)—"My life the last five years, I fear, will not be of much interest. Part of the time I was traveling with my family, spending the winter of 1895–96 in Spain, and the spring of 1896 up the Nile. In July I returned to America, and in the fall met my family again in Switzerland. The following winter and spring we spent in Dresden, where I tried to enthuse the English and American colony into starting a golf club, and I believe the only honor conferred upon me during the past five years was in being made the 'Honorable' Secretary of the Dresden Golf Club. The late spring of that year we spent in Paris, and the summer in England and Scotland, returning to America in the fall of 1897. The winter of 1897–98 we were at our country place at Manchester-by-the-Sea, and the winter of 1898–99 at Chestnut Hill, a suburb of Boston (coming here for the school), where we have since made our permanent home."

Married in 1888: one son, one daughter.

LOUIS BRANCH HARDING.

(Boston, May 15.)—"October 1, 1897, the firm of Mills & Harding, of New York and Boston, was dissolved. I then took on the Boston business of the old firm and formed a wool brokerage and commission house on my own account. My address is 620 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, Mass."

Married in 1889: two sons, two daughters.

WILLIAM BURT HARLOW.

(Kibbe, Conn., April 24.)—"Since writing you last I have been living in my country home with little change save occasional visits to Boston or New York. Among my books, gardening in the summer, writing and teaching in the winter, and long mountain drives at all seasons, an occasional visit to Springfield, Mass., nine miles away. So the years have fled.

"In 1895 my father died here, at the age of 73; in 1899 my mother died, and I was left quite alone in the quiet little home. April 29, 1899, I was married to Ida Gertrude Morehouse of Syracuse, N. Y. We have since then resided here. I have written for various periodicals and published two works since 1895.

"I enclose the only photograph taken since 1895, representing Sir Walter Scott at an author's party. You are at liberty to use it if it will be of any service."

RICHARD HEARD.

(Boston, June 19.)—"In the spring of 1896 I returned to this country from London, and most of the time and money I have had since then have been spent in getting acquainted with my countrymen. I have not been making my fortune; but I judge, from the state of my finances, that I have contributed to establish some other people's.

"In 1899 I brought over the Explorer Nansen to this country on a lecture tour, and, as far as I am concerned, his expedition to the United States eclipsed in excitement and incident his Polar Expedition. Since the Nansen racket I have settled down more or less in Boston, where I have an office which seems to be conscientiously avoided by '79 men.

"In June, 1899, I had the honor of organizing and conducting the music for the Class Dinner, and have found it necessary to rest most of the time since then.

"I have done what I could to secure recognition for the cause of the Boers and their Envoys in this part of the country, having in charge the Boston Division of the National Boer Relief Fund Association, and being Secretary of the Citizens' Reception Committee and of the most recent mass meeting at Faneuil Hall.

"I have written various articles for the newspapers, which are not worth mentioning, and one article in the Musical Record of Boston, January 1, 1900, being the 'Outline of a Project for the Establishment of a Permanent Opera in America.'"

SAMUEL HILL.

(Minneapolis, Minn., April 20.)—"My present residence is Minneapolis, Minn. I do not know of any office I have held since 1895. I am still President of Minneapolis Trust Company, President of the Eastern Railway of Minnesota, and of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway, and Director in the Great Northern Railway Company. I am still Vice-President of the Minneapolis Athenæum Library and a member of the Minnesota Historical Society. Am a member of the Harvard and University clubs in New York City, President of the Minnesota Harvard Club, and a member of the Town and Country, Minikahda, Lafayette, and Minnesota clubs; also member of the Cosmos Club, Washington; Silver Bow Club, Butte; Kitchi Gammi Club of Duluth. I am also a member of the Minnesota Commission for Celebrating the Acquisition of the Louisiana Purchase in 1903.

"We have two children: Mary Mendenhall Hill, born July 3, 1889; and James Nathan Hill, born August 23, 1893.

"I was a member of the Executive Committee of the Indianapolis Monetary Convention; but the most interesting thing that has happened to me, and the thing which I shall certainly remember all my life, was my selection by the Associated Harvard Clubs at Chicago, December 2, 1899, as their candidate for the Board of Overseers of Harvard University.

"I believe this is the sum and substance of everything I have to say, except that I will try and get the photograph, if opportunity offers. I think I have had none taken within five years.

"I was the guest of the New York Harvard Club at its annual dinner given at the Waldorf, February 21st, and the guest of the Chicago Harvard Club at its annual dinner, February 24th, and all I can say is, that I enjoyed the occasions very much; probably more than those did who heard me speak."

Was elected Overseer this Commencement, receiving the largest number of votes cast for any candidate.

Married in 1888.

WILLIAM BANCROFT HILL.

(Poughkeepsie, April 19.)—"In these days of restless ministers and dissatisfied congregations you may be surprised to find me still in Poughkeepsie after a pastorate of ten years, with no desire on my part or, as far as I can judge, on the part of my people for a change. I am a little surprised myself. But every time the question of making a change has come up I have decided to remain where I am. I do not think my state is one of stagnation, but of solid content. I have all the work I can do, and work I thoroughly enjoy, income enough for my wants, friends in abundance, a beautiful country, a fair digestion, and a good conscience. Which of these would you change?

"Last year I enlarged my work by adding to it the charge of Bible Study at Vassar College. I gave two regular electives, open to Juniors and Seniors, and some lectures before the whole college. This year I shall offer three electives. I find this work very pleasant and profitable. And, by the way, if any of you have daughters coming to Vassar let me know it, for I shall be glad to show them any kindness for their fathers' sake.

"There is nothing in the past five years of special importance to chronicle. My printed works have been few and insignificant; the numerous clubs and organizations to which I belong are mostly local; my longest journey was a summer trip to Norway in 1895; and the routine of my daily life is that of any hard-working, contented pastor, preacher and teacher."

Married in 1892: no children.

GEORGE HOADLY.

(Cincinnati, May 29.)—"My life is very uneventful, being the usual humdrum routine of legal practice, varied only by a little golf when I can find time for it. My residence is where it has been since the last report, Grandin Road, Cincinnati, where I have built me a house since last reporting. I am a member of the Queen City Club, 'The Pillars,' the Cincinnati Golf Club, and the Misquamicut Golf Club, and am one of the trustees of the Cincinnati College.

"I send you photograph taken four years ago. There is not much change since except that my hair is a good deal grayer, but fortunately I have still some to become gray."

Married in 1894: one son, one daughter.

ANDREW HALL HODGDON.

(Dedham, Mass., June 5.) — "My last five years have been much the same as the preceding ones. I have continued the practice of medicine in Dedham with abundant success, and have enjoyed my profession and the duties and responsibilities it brings.

"My positions of honor and trust have all been purely local, consisting of the office of Medical Examiner for the First Norfolk District; Trustee for local bank, member of the School Board, and Chairman of Parish Committee of the Old First Parish Church.

"My daily routine of life is the care of my patients from early morn to late at night, with the exception of two or three weeks spent away from home each summer. My days are busy, and, therefore, pass quickly and happily.

"I send a picture taken about six years ago."

Married in 1888: three sons.

GEORGE CLARENDON HODGES.

(Boston, April 19.)—"No change of state, occupation or address. Jackson and I now have law offices together, yet are both in good health, at 31 Milk Street, Boston.

"I send a positive — no use in sending a negative to such a wheedling chap as you — and 'an ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own.' It gives not the gray hairs or other evidences of age and carking care, 'but 'tis enough, 'twill serve.'"

Unmarried.

JABISH HOLMES.

(New York, July 2.)—"The past five years have passed much like the previous ones since graduation, and, therefore, there is little to write which would interest the class. The life of a lawyer is filled with much hard work and few startling events.

"My literary efforts consist entirely of briefs in cases which I have argued in the courts of this State and in the Supreme Court at Washington, and, although of great interest to me, unfortunately do not count in your list.

"For several years I have been a member of the firm of Russell & Holmes, but from the 1st of July I have become a member of the law firm of Dixon & Holmes, the senior member of which is my cousin, a graduate of Yale, of the Class of 1869, and formerly a member of the firm of Miller, Peckham & Dixon, which he leaves to form this partnership with me.

"My address will be the Mutual Life Building, 32 Liberty Street, New York City, where I am always glad to see any of the class who may call.

"An event of the greatest interest to me occurred at Pelham Manor on March 11, 1899, when my son, Jabish Holmes, Jr., was born. He is a fine, strong boy, and I hope at some distant day will aid in upholding the fame of Harvard. I am glad to say that no death has as yet entered my family circle.

"I am a member of the University Club of New York City, of the Manor Club of Pelham Manor, of the Garden City Golf Club, and of the Pelham Country Club."

Married in 1890: one son, two daughters.

THOMAS JOHNSTON HOMER.

(Boston, May 26.)—"In June of 1895, in the hope of finding my old friends, Harold Whiting of '77 and his wife and their children, I went to the west coast of Mexico. I hope you knew Whiting, a man of rare and sterling quality and of great ability in his chosen field of physical science.

"With his lovely wife and four little children he was homeward bound on the Pacific Mail steamship 'China,' which foundered and sank off the west coast below Manzanillo, May 27, 1895. No one of the Whiting family was of the few that survived.

"From the west coast I went to the City of Mexico, and thence to Amecameca, and went up from Amecameca to the crater of Popocatepetl.

"On the 29th of January, 1897, I was married to Ella Louise Stowell, daughter of the late Edmund Hersey Stowell and of Susan Laura Stowell of Roxbury, where we continue to live. We have one child, a boy of nineteen months, who, we are told, and are prone to believe, is a remarkable child."

DUANE HOPKINS.

(On Board R. M. S. "Oceanic," June 15.) — "During the greater part of the time since 1895 I have had charge of the English Department at Westminster School, Dobbs Ferry, New York. This last year I gave entirely to coaching and private tutoring in New York City, and am planning to do the same the coming season.

"There is little to write which I think would prove at all entertaining, though my life has by no means been stupid or unenjoyable. I have been able to do some traveling; and a trip which most interested me was the one I made through the Orient in 1896, with one of my pupils.

"I am now on my way to spend the summer in England and on the Continent."

Unmarried.

SAMUEL HOWLAND HOPPIN.

(New York, May 26.) — "My occupation (lawyer) remains unchanged, but my office address and residence have both changed since 1895. My office is now at 55 Liberty Street, and my residence is No. 120 West 55th Street, New York City.

"I am a member of the Union Club, Association of the Bar, and American Geographical Society.

"In 1898 I went to Europe and passed two months in traveling, principally in Switzerland and the north of Italy.

"The last professional photograph I have had taken was the class photograph in 1879."

Unmarried.

EDWARD LOVELL HOUGHTON.

(Pawtucket, R. I., June 11.) — "When I wrote my contribution to our last class report, in June of 1895, our little boy had just arrived, May 31st. During the few months following he was very ill, and we at times feared he might not be spared to us. But, thanks to a good constitution which he must have had to start with, he pulled through, and has had no serious sickness since. The family consists, as at that writing, of self and wife, daughter and son, all well and happy.

"I was also about to make a change of field of labor at that time. We left Fairfield, Me., August 1st, after a pastorate of four years, not then knowing where our lot would next be cast. But the way very soon opened, and by the middle of October I was settled and at work as pastor of the Church of Our Father, the Universalist parish of this city. Here we have lived since that time, and have found, and still find, our home and work here very pleasant.

"The routine of my life is, I suspect, very like that of most parish ministers, especially like any settled, as I am, in a busy manufacturing city. Those of my classmates who are in similar work, and to a less extent those who are not in it themselves, but are acquainted with and interested in some church and minister, can imagine what occupies most of my time almost as well as I could tell it. I have now been trying to do the work of the ministry for something more than fifteen years, and have learned that any minister who is half-way faithful to his work will have no idle time; and, though blessed with excellent health, like myself, will be thoroughly tired when the working season is over. I think I enjoy my work more and more. I am glad, also, to say that I think the latest years of my ministry have been the most fruitful and satisfactory.

"The pressure of parish duties has left me little opportunity for any literary work outside of getting ready for the Sundays. Nothing more than a minister's usual share of addresses at conferences, conventions, and the like, some of which have been published in denominational journals. I still aspire toward work of a more permanent kind, such as may be worthy of book form — in New Testament studies; but when, if ever, such work may be expected to see the light I should not dare to guess.

"In July, 1898, I took a modest trip across the continent to the Pacific Northwest, which I greatly enjoyed; which also very much increased my desire for more of the same thing; which I suppose to be a common experience. My route took me through the mountains of Colorado, to Salt Lake City, where a few hours' stay enabled me to see some of the most notable things; thence to Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and Victoria. Return by the Northern Pacific, with a week's tour of Yellowstone Park — the fit climax of the whole tour. I was away from home just over a month, and returned invigorated in body, broadened in mind, and with a very much more adequate idea of this country of ours than I had before."

Married in 1883: one son, one daughter.

FRANCIS AUGUSTINE HOUSTON.

(Boston, May 28.) — "I much regret that my doings for the past five years will hardly make interesting reading for our class report. The normal professional and domestic experiences which come between the ages of thirty-five and forty may be of surpassing interest and value to the chief actor, but offer little in the way of interest for one's friends.

"I am still Counsel for the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., offices at 125 Milk Street, Boston, and find in the position constant and exacting employment — so much so, that I have found time for nothing outside my professional employments, not even for journeys, except such as are made necessary for business purposes, and these are confined to the New England States.

"On the personal and domestic side, my life for the past five years has presented nothing worthy of record, except a change in residence, to Concord, Mass., making me a neighbor of our classmates, Keyes and Hudson. You are sufficiently acquainted with Concord to know something of our simple domestic life, and of the interest which all take in the affairs of the town. In all of these matters I have tried to do my part, and to this home life devote all the time which the exactions of business allow me.

"My two small sons, previously reported, are growing in stature — I hope in grace — and some time early in the coming century will become members of the 'best Freshman Class ever known.' Both boys — ages eleven and ten — are now in our Concord public schools, but it is quite likely that later they will need the attention of Principal Amen and his colleagues at Exeter. Truth compels me to admit that just at present the principal interest of the young men is preparation for various athletic pursuits which they seem to think receive more or less attention at college. Perhaps Amen will be more successful than I have been in persuading them that they are in error, and possibly satisfy them that their ambition should be to shine in debate. I am sorry that I have not been able to enliven your pages, but must be satisfied if I have shown in my letter a busy man fortified in domestic felicity."

Married in 1887: two sons.

* WILLIAM DE CREET HOWARD.

Born January 1, 1856, at Chicago, Ill.

Died November 3, 1898, of tuberculosis, at Phœnix, Arizona, where he had been for two years, with his wife, seeking recovery of his health. The burial was at his home, in Chicago.

WILLIAM HAMMOND HUBBARD.

(Chicago, June 13.) — "In April, 1895, I had a very serious illness and recovered from it very slowly.

"On the 11th of June, 1896, my first and only son was born, and I am glad to say that he is now a sturdy, fine boy; and it is my hope that he will graduate at Harvard with credit to himself and the University.

"In August, 1897, an opportunity was offered me to go to Alaska, on special business, for one of the large transportation companies, which had been established there for some years. As I was still far from well, my physician thought that the winter in that cold, dry atmosphere would be of great benefit to me. I left Chicago on the 14th of August, 1897, and reached Seattle on the 18th, expecting to go over the Chilkoot Pass and down the Yukon River to Dawson. On reaching Seattle, however, I found that the transportation company had secured passage for me on the steamer 'Humboldt' to St. Michael's, thence up the river by one of their river steamers to Dawson. The voyage to St. Michael's from Seattle was safe and full of interest; but the steamer was very much overloaded, and there would have been great danger had we encountered bad weather. The number of passengers was so great that it was out of the question to eat in the dining saloon, on account of the dirt and horrible food that was offered. Our party found it necessary to get into their own stores and supply themselves with such things as could be used without cooking. The trip up the Yukon was full of exciting events, and a great disappointment to many who found it would be impossible to reach Dawson unless they remained at Fort Yukon until the river froze over, and they therefore made the trip of nearly 400 miles with dog teams. I returned to Rampart City, about 900 miles below Dawson, on the river, and much farther north, being close to the Arctic Circle. With the closing of the river, a few days after my arrival at that point, all communication with the outside world ceased, until the arrival of the first mail, on the 20th of April, 1898, gave us news of the blowing up of the 'Maine,' but left us entirely in the dark as to the outcome of the difficulties with Spain. Our next mail, five weeks later, gave us not only the account of the opening of the war, but of the capture of Manila and the destruction of the Spanish fleet. I went to Dawson for a short time in June, and returned by way of St. Michael's and Seattle to Chicago, reaching here in the latter part of July, 1898, after an absence of something over eleven months. My health, I am glad to say, is very much improved, and the experience was full of novelty and interest from beginning to end. I am back at my desk in the same business in which I have been interested for about twelve years.

"I have done nothing in the literary way beyond writing a paper for the Chicago Literary Club on my experience in Alaska."

Married in 1889: one son, three daughters.

WOODWARD HUDSON.

(Concord, Mass., April 22.)—"I am still living in Concord, Mass., and practicing law in Boston as First Assistant General Counsel of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company. I have one child, a daughter, Marion, born at Concord, December 12, 1895.

"I have done no literary, scientific, political or commercial work.

"I was elected by the town one of its Sewer Commissioners, March 29, 1897, and still serve. This has not been a 'position of honor,' though perhaps one of 'trust.'

"I am still a member of the New England Free Trade League, of the Harvard Law School Association, of the Bar Association of the City of Boston, of 'The Social Circle in Concord,' and of the Concord Free Public Library, of which I am Treasurer. In 1899 I became a member of the Middlesex Bar Association. In 1895 I was a charter member of the Concord Golf Club, organized that year, and am still a member. I have never played golf.

"If I have 'any especial interest,' aside from law, it is an amateurish interest in forestry on a very small scale.

"My most 'interesting experience' has been a light attack of typhoid fever in June and July, 1898.

"My Boston address is Room 340, South Station."

Married in 1880.

*AUSTIN PARKS HUNTINGTON.

The following account of Huntington is written for the Report by Professor James Mills Peirce:

Austin Parks Huntington was born in Chicago, December 7, 1857. He was the son of John Myers Huntington (born in New York, April 3, 1821), who married, September 2, 1856, Mary A. Austin Parks of Boston. The earliest ancestor of the line in America, Simon Huntington, was brought here in childhood by his mother in 1633—his father, also named Simon, having died on the voyage—and became one of the settlers of Norwich, Connecticut, which is still recognized as the ancient home of the family on this side of the water. The name has always been an eminent one in New England history; belonging to widely separated branches of a common stock, everywhere honorably esteemed for intelligence, ability, patriotism and sturdy virtues. Austin had for his great great grandfather General Jabez Huntington, well known as a distinguished officer of the American Revolution. He was also a direct descendant of the colonial governors, Winthrop and Saltonstall. He was justly proud of his ancestry, and no notice of his life and character would be complete without allusion to it.

Mr. John Huntington died October 14, 1864, and his widow moved in the following winter to Boston, where Austin was prepared for college at Mr. John P. Hopkinson's school. On his graduation he became a student at the Columbia Law School, New York; and he subsequently practiced his profession in that city, in partnership with a cousin — Frederick Huntington. Ultimately, he relinquished active practice, having formed business connections which occupied the last years of his life, and led him to undertake extensive journeys. Until 1890 he was a resident of New York; but from that year he made his home at the family seat at Norwich.

He married, April 15, 1885, May Blackstone Freeman of New York and Norwich. They had three children, namely: Mara, born in New York, March 14, 1886, died at Lucerne, Switzerland, October 20, 1894; Julia Tallmadge, born in New York, April 13, 1888, died at Norwich, October 28, 1890; and Mildred Saltonstall, born in New York, November 25, 1889.

Huntington made a business visit to Europe in 1886, and another in 1888, extending his travels, on one of these occasions, as far as Constantinople. On this distant journey he encountered exposures which seriously impaired his health, and he was afterwards always something of an invalid. In 1890 he went to South America; and in August, 1893, he set out again on the same voyage, hoping to gain from it some degree of restoration to health and strength. On his homeward course a change for the worse occurred, and he was landed at Martinique. There, far from all his friends, he died, November 23, 1893. His body was brought home to Norwich for burial. His widow went abroad soon after with her two surviving children, of whom the elder died at Lucerne in 1894.

Mrs. Huntington continues to live for the most part in Europe, devoting herself to the education of her youngest and sole remaining daughter. She has, however, passed a large portion of the past year in this country, making her residence principally at Norwich.

Huntington had a marked individuality both of character and of mind. No one could come often into contact with him and not feel this. Intimate knowledge was needed to understand him fully; and even to his nearest friends, perhaps also to himself, he was sometimes an enigma. He was a man of deep intensity of feeling, which was capable of shaking his whole being by its force; but he studied to keep his feeling in control, and prided himself on the strength he was able to bring into this service. He was true and devoted to his friends, and, though he sometimes liked to tantalize them, — for he always enjoyed the exercise of power over those about him, — he inspired them with strong and lasting affection. His nature lay wide open to every stirring influence. He was sensitive to all life had to offer, — to both its lower and its higher happiness; but he aspired to its best ideals, though, of course, he did not always reach them. He was a highly-organized human being, with the strong pulses of a full and vigorous vitality; not one of those fortunate people who have to undergo no moral struggles, and never swerve for an instant from their chosen aims. To him, as to most men keenly alive to emotion, the pain of living was even more familiar than its delights. He had periods of deep suffering from depression and from constitutional unhappiness.

Huntington was gifted with a high degree of intellectual talent. He saw clearly and easily to the root of a complicated question, and possessed an argumentative strength which it was hard to combat. He formed strong and excellent literary judgments, and had a natural gift of literary expression. His enthusiasm for what was noblest in the great writers was a quality which rendered him an interesting companion to reading and thinking people of all ages. He was fond of Bandello's "Romeo and Juliet," and thought Shakespeare mistaken in altering its conclusion; and he made an admirable translation of it. He wrote a charming article on "Richard H. Barham." His favorite poet was Shelley, that "pard-like spirit" who appeals so intensely to ideal minds. He was an ardent lover of music, delighting most in what searches deepest into the soul of man. That which seemed to him shallow in its comprehension of human emotion he rejected. For this reason he loved Beethoven; but was indifferent to Mendelssohn. He was, above all, at war with conventionalism in feeling and character. Huntington was, in short, a man of positive thought, noteworthy ability, a warm temperament, and a strong and elemental nature, — a nature having heights and depths. None who knew him can lose the impression which he made; none who loved him can cease to remember him with deepest interest and affection. It will always be consoling to think of him as beyond the sphere of the dissatisfaction and strife which beset the mortal lot of high-strung natures.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not and torture not again;
From the contagion of the world's slow stain
He is secure, and now can never mourn
A heart grown cold, a head grown grey in vain;
Nor, when the spirit itself has ceased to burn,
With sparkless ashes load an unlamented urn.

WILLIAM EVERETT HUTCHINS.

(Boston, June 14.) — "I am still practicing law in Boston at the same old address, and continue to reside in Cambridge. My family is the same — no births, no deaths. I am, perhaps, a little stouter, but no older in feeling. Have hunted in vain for a single gray hair.

"Have not had a photograph taken since graduation, but will try to send one in a few days."

Married in 1882: two daughters.

WILLIAM DEWITT HYDE.

(Brunswick, Me., April 28.)—"These have been five years of quiet, uneventful work. The college has been fairly prosperous, having doubled the number of students, value of buildings, amount of endowment, and annual income since I came here fifteen years ago. We now have 240 students in college, and about 100 medical students. Just now we are rejoicing in the prospect of a new library building, and the happy issue of ten years of litigation over a $400,000 bequest. I spent five months in Europe in 1897. I have lectured in summer schools at Colorado Springs, Chicago University, Chautauqua and Harvard, and have promised a course in the Summer School of Methods for teachers at Hingham the coming July. I received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Syracuse University. I was University Preacher at Harvard in 1897–98, and in 1898–99. The only position I hold at present which will enable me to render any direct service to the class of '79 is that of Judge of names to be inscribed in the 'Hall of Fame.'"

Is President of Bowdoin College.

Married in 1883: one son.

DAVID OTIS IVES.

No reply since 1895. Address, St. Louis, Mo.

Married in 1894. In 1895 had one son.

GEORGE WEST JACKSON.

(Boston, Mass., May 1.)—"Since the last report, great and happy events have come into my life, as on April 23, 1896, I was married, at Boston, to Grace Irving Whiting, daughter of Irving Oscar and Angeline Geraldine Whiting, of Boston.

"We have had one child, Leonard, born at Brookline, January 14, 1897; and he is now in active training for every branch of athletics known at the present date, though I must confess that he will break training on the slightest provocation.

"Our home was for a time in Brookline, and then we moved into a house we built for ourselves at 34 Ballard Street, Newton Center.

"My occupation is the same as before, the law, and my business address the same, 31 Milk Street, Boston, the only change being that I have recently moved into new quarters, which I share with Hodges, '79.

"The only clubs I am a member of are the University Club of Boston and the Newton Golf Club.

"The routine of my life is that of every office lawyer, varied, however, by the journeys around the links and 'My Summer in a Garden' (with an apology to C. D. W.).

"Desiring an absolute change, my wife and I recently took a trip to Jamaica, and we found what we were seeking — a beautiful climate, fine scenery and entire restfulness; truly a boon to everyone."

MARTIN REILEY JACOBS.

(Brownsville, Pa., June 7.) — "I was married, March 18, 1896, to Virginia Elizabeth Edmiston, daughter of William A. Edmiston of Brownsville, Pa. Have one child, a daughter, Anne Snowdon Jacobs, born April 4, 1897.

"As to occupation, I am a trustee of my father's estate, and have been since 1883. As said estate is an entailed trust, I presume I will have it on my hands during the rest of my life. If you get out of a job, and would like the business, I might be induced to part with it. I find the life of a trustee for forty or fifty heirs, with prospect of that many more, not the most desirable of occupations; but, as I cannot get rid of it, I presume I must stand it.

"I am constantly taking business trips about the United States, but cannot at present go into details concerning them."

HENRY WARREN JOHNSON.

(Berlin, N. H., June 21.) — "Little has happened since my last account of myself was written that is worth noting. I am still located in Berlin, N. H., a city of about 10,000 population, engaged in the practice of medicine. Am still unmarried. Don't seem to have time for matrimonial matters. Think it is a mistake, which it is now too late to rectify, although at last accounts I believe more than half the class were living lives of 'single cussedness.'

"I still hold the same offices under the city government that I have held for five years back: Chairman of the Board of Public Instruction and of the Trustees of the Public Library, of which latter institution I am here considered the father.

"I passed the winter and spring of 1898 in England and France, most of the time being spent in the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin.

"I have done no literary work deserving of mention — a paper on the 'Etiology of Prostatitis,' read before a Massachusetts medical society, but which I refused to allow published; and one on the 'Treatment of Abortion by Method of Plugging,' read before a New Hampshire society.

"I may say that I am a member of the Essex County Medical Society and the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynecological Society, both of Massachusetts, and of the New Hampshire Plato Society; also of a local social club."

WEBSTER KELLEY.

(Boston, May 8.) —"Have been absent from Boston several years since '92. One year, each, at Yale and at Princeton; one at Bible Institute, Chicago.

"Owing to ill health have not entered the ministry, as was my intention; but hope in time to accomplish something in the Master's cause worthy of report.

"Am at present residing at my home in Boston."

Unmarried.

PRESCOTT KEYES.

(Concord, Mass., June 29.)—"I am still living in Concord, Mass., and practicing law at 5 Tremont Street, Boston.

"I have been for many years a member of the Social Circle in Concord, organized 1782, a Trustee of the Middlesex Institution for Savings, Vice-President of the Concord National Bank, and Special Justice of the District Court of Central Middlesex. I served as Chairman of the School Committee for six years, and was Chairman of the Special Building Committee for the enlargement of the High School building. As a member of the Municipal Light Board, I was instrumental in establishing a municipal electric light system. I have been for several years Chairman of the Standing Committee of the First Parish in Concord (Unitarian), and am now also Chairman of the Building Committee which has charge of the restoration of our ancient meeting house, destroyed by fire last April.

"I am spending some of my money in 'riotous farming,' and some more of it on the education at Hampton, Virginia, and in Concord of a young Porto Rican, Raphael del Gardo, who came back as a stowaway with our Concord Company."

Married in 1881: no children.

CHARLES ARCHBALD KIDDER.

(Southboro, Mass., May 1.)—"I am still out of active business and pass most of my time in the country, so that there are very few exciting incidents in my life to record. A journey to California in the winter of 1898-99 is the extent of my wanderings in the last five years. I am a member of the Somerset Club of Boston, and my address is Southboro, Mass."

Married: two sons.

EDWARD PHIPPS KINGSBURY.

(Olympia. Wash., April 25.)—"My life since 1895 has been a mingling of business and politics. Until 1899 I was engaged in the mercantile business at Centralia, Wash., incidentally being a member of the Washington Legislature in 1898–1899. In the fall of 1899, was appointed United States Surveyor-General for the State of Washington, which position I now hold, my address being Olympia.

"I have not bound myself to society by many new ties, being still a bachelor, and my only society — that of the Sons of the American Revolution."

"No family changes since 1895. I am still with the Lackawanna Iron & Steel Co., as Superintendent of Blast Furnaces, and still reside at Scranton, Pa.; but during the coming year the company will move its works to Buffalo, N. Y., where I shall be in closer touch with our Class Secretary.

"I have just returned from Germany, where I have been looking up some matters for the company in connection with the movement to Buffalo."

Married in 1885: two sons, one daughter.

THOMAS LEE.

(Albany, April 27.)—"I have done nothing to interest anybody in the class since your last report; written nothing, traveled little; neither married or, to my knowledge, added to the world's population.

"As to pictures, my class photograph was my last sitting, and is likely to continue so. This is first demand since '79. I don't feel up to facing a camera."

FREDERICK MOSES LEONARD.

(Philadelphia, July 3.)—"Present occupation, lawyer; residence, Philadelphia. In other respects, no changes since the last report.

"I note in the last report under my name, 'Southern & Southwestern Railway.' I am utterly at loss to know how this mistake occurred. It should be 'Norfolk & Western Railroad.'"

HERMAN STEWART LE ROY.

* FRANK VIRGIL McDONALD.

My brother, Frank Virgil McDonald, was born April 20, 1852, in the City of Sacramento, California, and died October 4, 1897, in the suburbs of the City of London, England, of paralysis.

Though born in California he was educated in the East and Europe. From the age of nine to fourteen years he lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., attending the Polytechnic Institute School; then he went to boarding school, at Weinheim (Baden), Germany, where he remained until about sixteen years old, when he was taken out and put in a French boarding school, called "Institution Maison," Paris, where he remained some two years; after which he returned to New York and again resumed his studies at the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn.

In the year 1871 he returned to Germany, at Jena (Saxe-Weimar), and pursued his studies, learning very thoroughly French and German, and the dead languages; after which stay he returned to America and graduated from Yale College in 1878.

In the fall of 1879 he entered the Senior Class of Harvard University, from which he graduated and entered the Harvard Law School, which he quit in 1881, and came to San Francisco, Cal., and assisted his father.

In 1884 he went to Europe, where he remained till about 1888, when he returned again to San Francisco, where he was until 1893.

In the fall of 1893 he set out to make a tour of the world — and he did so — going by Honolulu, Yokohama, India, Red Sea, arriving in London in 1896, where he lived till death overtook him.

From boyhood until his death, my brother was always distinguished for his physical strength and literary ability. In athletic sports he was always a leader, having taken various prizes. As for literary accomplishments, he was continually engaged in it. He spent many years of his spare time in compiling and giving to the world genealogies of the McDonald family, copies of which he presented to various libraries, notably to the libraries of Harvard and Yale universities. Then there came from his pen many beautiful poems, essays, and short stories, many of which it would have been my pleasure to have gathered together and published, had not his untimely death prevented it.

It may interest you to know that he was the founder and leading editor and manager of the now renowned Yale Daily News, which was the pioneer of some 160 other daily college publications. While at Yale, too, he owned, and controlled the policy of, the Yale Courant, then the rival of the Yale Record, both then being weeklies, but each one representing a different policy of class and college interests.

As a musician, he played the violin, piano and other instruments.

Those of his classmates at Harvard who were fortunate enough to know him can, and will, testify as to his many accomplishments, especially in fine photography.

As to his popularity, I can truthfully say, never was a man recorded in the history of Yale College who was as popular as he was. He had been only a little while at Yale College when his classmates, out of kindly feeling, carried him around the campus, proclaiming him to be their most popular man.

As his brother, I wish to bear testimony to his character, that of all living souls I have ever met (barring my mother) he was, in my opinion, and in the opinion of many to-day living in San Francisco, in New Haven, and other places, the purest and sweetest. R. H. McDONALD, Jr.

San Francisco, May 24, 1900.

WALLACE MACFARLANE.

CHARLES SAMUEL MACK.

(La Porte, Ind., April 23.)—"In July, 1895, I moved from Ann Arbor, Mich., to Chicago, Ill. During the following year I practiced medicine, and was a Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Hahnemann College, Chicago. During that year I became a candidate for the ministry in the New Church (Church of the New Jerusalem, or Swedenborgian), and was licensed to preach for one year. I spent the summer of 1896 at Weller's Grove, near La Porte, Ind. I stayed there until the 15th day of January, 1897, when I settled down to the practice of medicine in La Porte, where my home now is. I am Secretary of the City Board of Health, and have served one year as Physician to the County Asylum for the Poor — to the county jail and to the poor of the township. I am a medical examiner for the following fraternal orders: K. O. T. M., W. O. T. W., The Court of Honor, The Imperial Guild, The Fraternities Accident Order."

"In September, 1896, I was married, and in June, 1899, I had a very charming visit in Boston, thanks to seeing some of my old friends.

"I have little to say, except that if it is a sign of youth to hope that next year one will have more time, energy and virtue, then I am still young, in spite of some appearances to the contrary."

Was married September 9, 1896, at Quebec, to Alma Stuart, daughter of Chief Justice Sir Andrew Stuart and Dame Elmire Aubert de Gaspé.

ATHERTON PERRY MASON.

(Fitchburg, Mass., May 18.)—"I am still residing in Fitchburg and engaged in the practice of medicine, as heretofore.

"In one direction I have enlarged my knowledge and am now making more of a specialty of bacteriology. My interest in this subject has been increasing considerably for several years past, and so, in February, 1899, I began a course under Prof. H. C. Ernst, at the Bacteriological Laboratory of the Harvard Medical School and worked there about four months. After completing the course I fitted up a laboratory at my residence, and since June, 1899, have held the position of Bacteriologist of the Fitchburg Board of Health, and have had a good deal of work to do in this line, both for the city and for physicians in this vicinity.

Other hunting has resulted in the making and describing, for the Historical Society of Bucks County, Pennsylvania, an ethnological collection representing the implements and utensils of the American Pioneer.

"Several pamphlets, recently written, oppose vivisection, and refer to investigations showing the survival of the fine arts, illuminative writing, pottery, and decorated iron casting among Pennsylvania Germans. The family register which you enclose is correct up to date, barring the inaccuracies in spelling, which I have corrected. I am sorry that I have no interesting experiences to relate or distinguished services to report; but such is the case, and I must rely for your approval solely on the brevity and promptness of my response. "I was married June 21, 1898, in St. Paul's Church, Boston, by the Rev. John S. Lindsay, D. D., to Georgie Howe Townsend of Boston. My wife is a graduate of Boston University (1880), where she also received the degree of A. M. in 1885.

"My Spanish studies have necessarily fallen somewhat into abeyance, though one can hardly drop the language entirely in these days when we are absorbing so much Spanish into our political system. My wife is also interested in the study, and our Spanish Club still has an occasional meeting. We have been reading comedies of late — the classic 'El Si de las Niñas,' and others of lesser note."

EDWARD CLIFFORD PERKINS.

(New York, June 12.)—"I send you herewith complete statistics as to population in my house, with the compliments of the author.

"I am still engaged in practicing law at 115 Broadway, as I have been since 1882. My life is purely that of an ordinary, everyday lawyer who has his nose held down pretty tight to the grindstone, and I can think of no details which would interest you or our classmates. In 1895 I entered into partnership with Mr. E. E. Jackson, Jr., and our firm has been fairly successful and is, I think, favorably known, in this city at least.

"I send you herewith a photograph taken some two or three years ago."

Married in 1882: four sons, two daughters.

*ALBERT POOR.

Albert Poor was born November 21, 1853, in Andover, Mass., the town of which his forbears had been among the earliest settlers, and there he got his early education, graduating from the Johnson High School. For several years thereafter he was in business, steadily pursuing his studies, however, in the intervals of his regular duties, and for the year before entering Harvard teaching in the same high school where formerly he had been a pupil.

After graduation from college he passed through the Harvard Law School with credit, and when called to the bar again gave to teaching what time could be spared from his profession, a course which helped to develop one of his marked traits — the great accuracy of his information. In this way he learned, also, how best to help others struggling, as he had himself struggled, for a college education, and to that goal, by precept, material aid and private instruction, he carried many a boy, without other return than their gratitude and his own sense of duty done.

Outside of the demands of his profession he gave much time and thought to the welfare of his native town, serving as Chairman of its Park Commission and Vice President of the Village Improvement Society and of the Indian Ridge Association. In his leisure hours he studied deeply the history of Andover, and steeped himself thoroughly in the legends and traditions of the vicinity, rich in tales of Indian times, so that, in 1896, he was at once selected as Orator of the Day for the celebration of the town's 250th anniversary. His address on that occasion was such as we should naturally expect of him — scholarly, learned, instructive and refined — and is of more than passing interest to the student of our Commonwealth's history.

In 1898 he was a member of the Legislature of Massachusetts, representing Andover for one term, narrowly escaping reëlection, despite the fact that his attitude on the question of taxing property held for educational purposes failed to meet with the approval of the majority of his townspeople. In this instance, as in others, duty, not self-interest, was his guide, and whether his vote was popular or not had no weight with him, once having decided that he was right.

His quiet and uneventful life ended Monday afternoon, June 11, 1900, without suffering, after an illness of but a few days. We, who were fortunate enough to see him often, now miss a cheerful companion and always loyal friend; the community loses an earnest man and upright citizen. G. C. H.

In Poor's "Class Life" (deposited in the college library), which he wrote June 26, 1879, the day of his first Phi Beta Kappa dinner, and the day after he had delivered his Commencement Part on "The Platonic Idea in Art," he traces the family genealogy very fully back to Daniel Poor, one of the first settlers of Andover, in 1644, with biographical tables, and states that it can be followed back, without question, to Roger Le Peor, Chancellor of England in 1100.

There are a few passages in the "Life" which it may be well to quote here:

"I practically prepared for college in three months prior to the examination in September, 1875. I had studied no Greek at all, and after twelve lessons of an hour each I went on myself, and in six weeks, studying three hours each forenoon, had read the amount required for admission. Meanwhile, I went over all my work and got into college with four conditions — geometry, Greek poetry, ancient history and geography, and algebra.

"My chief reason in coming to college was not to store up facts, but to develop myself as a man, and I did not disregard, also, the prestige which a college education grants a man.

"For the immediate future my plans are quite unformed. I intend to be a lawyer, and, at the same time, want to be concerned largely in business matters. The best kind of life is one of activity, and such is the one I want. How to attain this is the problem that is now before me." F. A.

FRANK LESLIE PORTER.

(Lawrence, Mass., June 12.)—"I do not seem to have anything that I care to report. Perhaps I have a great deal that I ought to consider important; for I have had no serious losses or misfortunes, and cannot complain at all at the way the world has treated me.

"I have made substantial progress in a number of directions; but the description of a business man's progress — devoid of Napoleonic features — would be as dull as a realistic novel, and I should hate to have a crime like that charged to my account.

"My literary work has been limited to an occasional paper."

Married in 1884: no children.

HARFORD WILLING HARE POWEL.

Has not been heard from since 1895.

WALLACE PREBLE.

(Cambridge, May 27.)—"You ask for a report of the last five years. I think it is only a repetition of the previous one. I am still practicing medicine at 22 Appian Way, Cambridge. Am Aural Surgeon to the Boston Dispensary, and Physician for Diseases of the Throat and Ear at the Cambridge Hospital.

"I am still a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, Harvard Medical Alumni Association, Boston City Hospital Club, Cambridge Medical Impr. Society, and Colonial Club.

"My only literary work has been occasional medical papers, read at the society meetings.

"I think the small pictures a first-rate idea, and will try to send one later.

"My family remains the same — wife and one daughter."

Married in 1887.

WALTER CONWAY PRESCOTT.

(Newton Highlands, Mass., June 8.) — "Residence, 35 Lakewood Road, Newton Highlands, Mass.

"Clubs and societies — Bostonian Society, Charlestown Club, Massachusetts Fish and Game, London and Berlin Ex Libris Societies.

"For the last three years have been particularly interested in collecting book plates, and my collection amounts to about 9,000 different specimens."

Married in 1890: one son.

THOMAS WEBB PRESTON.

Went to Boston in the spring of 1900, and will probably locate permanently in the East, giving up his real estate business in Denver. Address, 186 Devonshire Street, Boston.

Married in 1885: one son, one daughter.

EARL BILL PUTNAM.

(Philadelphia, Pa., June 8.) — "In answer to your circular letter I beg to say that I removed from Rochester, N. Y., to Philadelphia, Pa., in the fall of 1895, for business and family reasons, but mainly to qualify as an Executor and Trustee under the will of Charlemagne Tower, deceased (1830), succeeding the late Richard Henry Lee (S. '75). One of my co-trustees is C. Tower (1872). I have my office with that of the estate, at 228 South Seventh Street, west of Washington Square.

"I am also interested in the Barristers' Bureau, a novel institution, founded a few years ago by a friend, and designed, as its charter indicates, 'to assist lawyers in the preparation of cases, by furnishing memoranda of authorities and briefs of argument on questions of law.'

"Since the last report, I have been elected a member of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, Sons of the Revolution, Historical Society of Pennsylvania, St. David's Golf Club, and Huntingdon Valley Country Club.

"My house address is 1926 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, and my summer home is still at Waterville, N. Y., where I am also interested in farming."

Married in 1882: two sons, three daughters.

BENJAMIN RAND.

(Cambridge, June 11.) — "The past five years have been characterized by unremitting work, which has also involved three vacation trips to Europe. The discovery of philosophical manuscripts and the preparation of bibliographies in the various domains of philosophy have been the main purposes of my researches. The results are now in process of publication. The most striking feature of the manuscript work, I may, however, state, is to make known the greatest modern stoic in the Third Earl of Shaftesbury. Throughout this period I have likewise held the position of a Harvard Instructor in Philosophy, the duties of which need here no description.

"In the summer of 1897 I attended, as a delegate of the American Historical Association, the celebration in Halifax, N. S., of the discovery of the continent of America by John Cabot. My traveling companion on that occasion was my senior colleague, Prof. William James. Again, in the summer of 1898, I was a guest at the opening of the Cabot Tower in Bristol, England; in the photograph of which ceremony your classmate may be found in the company of the Mayor of Bristol and Lord Dufferin."

Unmarried.

WILLIAM MINARD RICHARDSON.

(Boston, May 28.) — "My occupation [law] and residence [Cambridge] remain the same as at the time of the last report.

"I have an additional daughter, born April 27th of this year.

"I have been a Park Commissioner of Cambridge during the last four years, and have been contributing my surplus time towards beautifying the banks of the Charles River."

Married in 1888: three daughters.

FREDERICK HASTINGS RINDGE.

(California, May 7.) — Is still farming in Southern California, with post-office address at Santa Monica. Was Chairman of the recent victorious No-saloon Campaign in Santa Monica. Is the citizens' candidate for school trustee, election June 1st.

Has published two books: "Happy days in Southern California," and "Can You Read Your Title Clear to a Mansion in the Sky?" each privately printed, and has in press another, "The Best Way."

Has deposited, as a loan, with the Peabody Museum at Cambridge, his collection of aboriginal fine art in stone. Is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars. Writes:

"My present life is a continuation, in large measure, of my last report to you. It seems as if the ink was hardly dry on that. These five years have sped away."

Married in 1887: two sons, one daughter.

EDWARD ROBINSON.

(Boston, April 29.)—"The only change in my occupation during the last five years which is of sufficient interest or importance to be recorded in the class report is my appointment, in 1898, as Lecturer on Classical Archæology at Harvard University, which position I still hold, in addition to my former one in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. I lecture three times a week throughout the year (Fine Arts 3: The History of Greek Art), and my class this year numbers 186 enrolled students. I have also a small class for advanced study of the subject."

Married in 1881: one son.

EDWARD ABBOT ROBINSON.

(Buckland, Mass., June 1.)—"Since the last class report I have changed from an eastern to a western Massachusetts pastorate. I am now located in Buckland, in Franklin County. The work of a country pastor is mine; his tribulations, mine; and his joys, which are many, are mine in rich measure.

"My family circle remains as at the last report."

Married in 1885: two sons, one daughter.

HIRAM HOLBROOK ROSE.

(Chicago, June 9.)—"On my return from Europe I find your circular for report No. 6 on my desk.

"There is nothing new with me. I am still in business at the above number." [Rose & Co., mortgage, loans and investments, 108 Dearborn Street.]

THOMAS RUSSELL.

(Boston, June 28.)—"My present occupation is that of a lawyer, as at the time of the last report. I am now in practice by myself, the firm of Russell & Putnam, with which I was formerly connected, having been dissolved by the death of my partner in 1896. My present residence is at 3 Gloucester Street, Boston, and my office at Room 91, Ames Building, Boston.

"My summers are spent in a small place at Plymouth, Mass., where I am philanthropically engaged in feeding a large number of bugs of various kinds in my attempt to cultivate a small garden.

"I am a member of the Union Club of Boston, the Country Club of Brookline, the Hoosic Whisich Club of Canton, and the Old Colony Club of Plymouth. The only public position now held by me is that of Trustee of the Worcester Insane Hospital, to which I was appointed by Governor Wolcott last winter.

"I have one daughter, Barbara, born August 23, 1898."

Married in 1894.

CHARLES ELLIOTT ST. JOHN.

(Boston, Mass., May 24.)—"It may be remembered that in the fall of 1891 I took charge of a newly-established Unitarian Church in Pittsburg, Pa., and that at the time of my last report we had succeeded in building an edifice for our services and work. Since that time the society has prospered, becoming self-supporting with the year 1897. The membership has largely increased (ditto the minister's salary!). With some little attention to the causes of good city government and a purified water supply, I have mainly confined my efforts to parish and denominational affairs.

"In the denominational interests I have been very active, writing a good deal in our leading paper, speaking often at conferences and similar gatherings. (The Middle States Conference, The National Conference, The Ministers' Institute, the Annual Meeting of The American Unitarian Association, The Boston Unitarian Club, etc.) I have served on prominent committees of both The National Conference and The Middle States Conference, was from 1895 to 1898 a Director of The Unitarian Sunday School Society, and am at present a member of the Committee on Fellowship of the denomination and a Trustee of the Meadville Theological School.

Perhaps as a natural result of these wider activities, I was at the annual meeting of The American Unitarian Association, held May 22, 1900, elected to be its Secretary, the next to the highest administrative office in our body. Working under the President of the association (Rev. S. A. Eliot, '84), I shall have charge of our work of church extension, publication, official correspondence, etc. This will take me to Boston, where my office and permanent address will be at 25 Beacon Street. I shall move East early in July.

"At the last banquet of The Associated Harvard Clubs (held in Chicago in December) I was one of the speakers. Early last summer I gave myself the pleasure of naming a baby after Prescott Keyes, but after nine short months there came the sorrow of losing the little fellow together with his twin brother."

Married in 1888: two sons.

HENRY RUFUS SARGENT.

(Westminster, Md., April 21.) — "I am Master of Novices in the Order of the Holy Cross, but as our Order is small and the calls from outside both frequent and, at times, urgent, I am occasionally sent out by my Superior (J. O. S. Huntington, '75) to peace conferences, retreats, etc. A good deal of my time is spent in Westminster, in a life that, I fancy, would seem very commonplace to most of the men of '79, but one in which I find (Laus Deo) a constantly increasing happiness—training my novices in obedience and prayer and trying to win Heaven for them and myself, and for the many for whom we pray. Our correspondence is large, and is, in itself, a sort of apostolate, for it covers the greater part of this continent, and goes as far as to China and India.

"We live under life vows and by rule. We rise at 5 A. M., and are in chapel before 5.30. At 10 P. M. we are in bed, and between the hour of rising and of retiring the day is well filled with various duties in chapel and elsewhere. The younger clergy, Seminarists and laymen come often for spiritual retreats, to be prepared for ordination, to determine the question of vocation (on their knees), and to try to get strength to do whatever the good God may will them to do.

"Sometime in the future we hope to build a more commodious monastery at West Park, on the Hudson, where we have nearly seventy acres of land. At present we have no means with which to do this, and so my address will remain as heretofore."

WILLIAM SCHOFIELD.

Has not been heard from since 1895.

WILLIAM HENRY SCHWARTZ.

(Bangor, Me., June 20.) — "I am still living in Bangor, Me.

"In 1881 I formed a co-partnership with my brother, and we continue to carry on the same business — manufacturing saws and dealing in saw-mill and pulp-mill supplies — under the firm name of M. Schwartz' Sons.

"I am still unmarried."

Received his A. B., as of the class of 1879, in 1898.

EDWARD WESTON SHANNON.

(Kansas City, Mo., June 7.) — "I am still engaged in practicing law in Kansas City, Mo., and have my office at No. 316, New York Life Building."

Married in 1884: no children.

WILLIAM SHEAFE.

(Boston, June 6.) — "I have no changes since 1895 to report.

"In the summer of 1897 I took my wife and son abroad and traveled through England and France, and a part of the winter of 1898 we passed in India. With this exception, we have remained at home, — Boston."

Is in the real estate business, with office at 383 Washington Street, Boston. Married in 1888.

GEORGE RUMSEY SHELDON.

(New York, June 6.) — "The only photograph I have had taken in some years is one of a portrait by Chartran, painted this winter.

"There have been no changes in my family, I am happy to say, since your last report.

"As for myself, I have had fairly good health, and have been successful both in business and political affairs. Am a director in quite a number of large corporations, and a Delegate to the Republican National Committee from New York.

"None of my achievements, however, have been of enough importance to startle any one or to cast any additional lustre on the great class of '79."

With his brother, gave $150,000 to St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., in the winter of 1899–1900.

Married in 1881: two daughters.

HENRY AUGUSTUS SHUTE.

(Exeter, N. H., June 11.) — "Your friendly proddings have at last brought me to the point of giving a few details of my life during the past five years.

"It is difficult to recount any personal triumphs where none have occurred, and at my age I feel that I must console myself with the undoubted fact that our class of '79 has been made famous by the successes of many of its members, and try to bask a little in the reflected light of their achievements, of which, as a classmate, I am sincerely proud.

"My choice of the law as a profession was in a measure forced on me by my father, who, in some unaccountable way, had been deluded into the idea that the 'room at the top' was destined for me. How he could have entertained such an idea is 'known only to the Immortal Gods.' But, at all events, he has long since acknowledged his error, and philosophically consoles himself with the remark that, 'A lawyer is supposed to know something even if he don't.' However, I enjoy my profession thoroughly, even if I am not a shining success.

"My daily routine is somewhat as follows: I go to my office at eight, am busy until ten, when, if any unfortunates are awaiting me, I attend Police Court, and there try to do about the right thing, and occasionally, as my confrères say, legislate a little. The rest of the day is occupied in the details, petty details, of a general country practice, interesting to me, but of no great moment.

"A few years ago I was encouraged in the idea that I had a Heaven-born genius as a writer of fiction, and accordingly sailed in with great enthusiasm. But my stories in every instance returned promptly to me, with editorial information of a most discouraging character. I even went so far as to write a book, which, however, was, fortunately, for private distribution, and the entire edition consisted of but fifty copies. These I had great difficulty in forcing upon my unwilling friends, who were thus singled out for gratuitous distinction, and if any have read this book they have mercifully spared me the details. Thus has my ambition in another direction been ruthlessly crushed!

"The only vacation I have taken was in 1897, when I spent a month in Iowa, on the occasion of my marriage to Ella Kent.

"I belong to no organizations except musical and athletic, and my home-life is a happy and contented one."

Married first in 1885: one son, one daughter.

FRANK ERNEST SIMPSON.

Has not been heard from since 1885.

FREDERIC WARREN SMITH.

(Boston, June 5.) — Is still with Sidney Smith, Patent Method of Boiler Setting, 120 Milk Street, Boston. Was recently elected President of the Boston Athletic Association.

Married in 1888: no children.

SAMUEL SNELLING.

(Whitemarsh, Pa., April 26.)—"Have been rector of St. Thomas' Church, Whitemarsh, Montgomery County, Pa., since October, 1890. The parish, situated about twelve miles from Philadelphia, is one of the oldest in the country, and has historic associations of great interest, especially in the colonial period and at the time of the Revolutionary War.

"Have spent much time in the study of English literature and of the classics, and have prepared a series of lectures on the Pre-Shakesperian Dramatists. Have also written occasionally for papers and magazines. (See bibliographical record.)

"Went abroad two years ago, but was recalled by the sudden death of my wife, who died at Whitemarsh Rectory, on the 23d of August, 1898.

"Am a member of the Society of Colonial Wars. My address is Whitemarsh, Montgomery Co., Pa."

Married in 1884: no children.

CHARLES FRANKLIN SPRAGUE.

(Washington, D. C., May 22.)—"Since writing you last I will say that in 1894 I was Chairman of the Boston Park Commission, and in 1895–96 a member of the Massachusetts Senate, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs the latter year.

"I was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress as a Republican, receiving 22,933 votes against 10,114 for W. H. Baker, Free Silver Democrat. I was reëlected to the Fifty-sixth Congress, receiving 17,001 votes against 10,709 for W. H. Baker. In the Fifty-fifth Congress I served on three committees, namely, the District of Columbia, Accounts, and Civil Service. In the Fifty-sixth Congress I gave up two of them and kept the District of Columbia, for I am deeply interested in all matters relating to the district. During my term in Congress very many matters of national importance have been acted upon. The Dingley Tariff occupied my attention quite closely while it was under consideration. Later on came the war with Spain. The legislative work before, during and after the war was most interesting, and the appropriations during this time were the largest ever known. I shall look back with a great deal of pleasure to these three years in Congress, and as my present term does not expire until March, 1901, many other matters of public importance are sure to be enacted.

"I am a resident of Brookline, Mass., on what is known as Faulkner Farm, which is in the Eleventh District, and from which place I was elected to Congress. I was in Europe in 1895 and again in 1898."

Married in 1891: two daughters.

HAYWARD STETSON.

Has not been heard from since 1885.

MARION STORY.

(Blind Brook Farm, Portchester, N. Y., April 30.) — "I fear I have not much new information to give in regard to myself. I live here in the country at Portchester, New York, and for business am a special partner with the firm of E. & C. Randolph, Bankers and Brokers, 7 Nassau Street, New York.

"My six years at dear old Harvard have not resulted in any work, either literary, scientific or political; but what a good time I did have!"

Married in 1888: no children.

FRANCIS JOSEPH SWAYZE.

(Newark, N. J., April 22.)—"I hasten to reply to your circular letter of April 16th, 'lest I forget.'

"My present occupation is Judge of the Circuit Court. My residence is 40 James Street, Newark, N. J.

"In 1897 I was appointed by Governor Griggs a member of one of the commissions to revise the statutes. My particular work was the statutes relating to Orphans' Court, to executors and administrators and to infants.

"February, 1900, I was appointed by Governor Voorhees a Judge of the Circuit Court for a term of seven years. I immediately withdrew from the firm of Colie & Swayze, and have since devoted my whole time to the duties of my office. My particular work is the trial of all civil cases at nisi prius, where the amount involved exceeds $300. I also hear appeals on questions of law in civil cases from the District Courts of cities. My circuit is the most populous in the State, being the County of Essex, in which are the cities of Newark, the Oranges, Bloomfield, and Montclair. I therefore have plenty to do.

"I am a member of the American Bar Association, and one of the Local Council for this State; of the State Bar Association: of the Lawyers' Club of Essex County, of which I was Vice President until my resignation upon my appointment as Judge. My other activities have been of the usual kind, and need not be specially mentioned."

Married in 1887: no children.

JIREH SWIFT.

Is still in business in Pernambuco, Brazil, being a partner in the firm of Henry Forster & Co., doing a general export, import and commission business. About once in five years he takes a vacation of a year or more, which he usually spends in his home, New Bedford, Mass. He returned to Brazil in April, 1899, after a year's stay in New Bedford, and is expected to return here again in about two years.

Married in 1886: one son, one daughter.

WILLIAM HENRY SYLVESTER.

(Newtonville, Mass., April 22.)—"I am still teaching in the English High School of Boston. I have charge of the advanced class, from which we usually send a few boys to Harvard. I teach Latin in that class; but most of my teaching is English in the lower classes. My offer, in the last report, to exchange ideas was accepted by no one; so I have gone on to the study of music!

"The only outward change in my life during the last five years has come from the death of my son, November 16, 1895. As his mother is an invalid, her loneliness compelled us to give up housekeeping and go to boarding. I still live in Newtonville."

Married in 1883.

HERBERT TAPPAN.

Has not been heard from since 1895.

FRANK WILLIAM TAUSSIG.

(Cambridge, May 4.)—"My last biographical instalment for our reports was written in April, 1895, at Florence, Italy, in the course of a sabbatical year spent abroad. I returned to Cambridge in September of 1895, and since then have been steadily in academic harness; and the happenings in my life have been such as naturally come to a University Professor. I have had plenty of work to do in teaching, for the resort of students to the department of political economy is large and growing. The introductory course (what used to be Political Economy—now Economics) has over 500 students, and the more advanced courses have numbers in proportion. The lectures to these 500 men—the instruction is now in good part by lectures—I find a serious tax on my strength, but also a great source of satisfaction, since they give an inspiring opportunity of reaching the mass of the undergraduates.

"A good part of my time of late years has been given to my editorial duties on the Quarterly Journal of Economics, the University's publication in my subject. In 1896, Professor Dunbar resigned from the post of editor, to which I was appointed by the corporation. The Journal attained high repute among students of economics under Professor Dunbar's management, and it is my endeavor to maintain the standard which he set. I have also acted, since 1896, as Chairman of the Publication Committee of the American Economic Association, and in that capacity have had still further editorial and administrative work to do. In 1897 I was appointed by Governor Wolcott member of a commission to examine and report upon the laws on taxation in the State of Massachusetts, and, being chosen Secretary of the commission, gave much time and labor to its investigations. Indeed, the report of the commission, though it presented, of course, not my own conclusions but those of the commission as a whole, was drafted almost entirely by myself, and occupied me throughout the summer of 1897. In the winter of 1897, and again in 1898, I was sent to the Indianapolis Monetary Convention as delegate from the Boston Merchants' Association. In 1896 I was elected a member of the School Committee of the City of Cambridge, and have served on the committee since that date.

"This year (1900) wrote three considerable articles in consecutive numbers of the Quarterly Journal of Economics,— two on the 'Iron Industry of the United States,' one on the 'New Currency Act'; wrote another article on the 'Currency Act' for the British Economic Journal; prepared an article on 'Tariffs' for the new edition of the Cyclopedia Britannica; and delivered a Commencement Address on 'Education for the Business Man' before the University of Missouri, on July 4th.

"I append a list of my writings [see Bibliographical Record], which indicates what subjects have chiefly engaged my attention."

Married in 1888: one son, three daughters.

FREDERICK HENRY TEMPLE.

(Boston, June 29.) — "There is not much of interest that I have to report of myself and my doings during the past five years.

"Just say that I have resided and have been practicing law in Boston. Have not engaged in politics to any extent, and have held no public office, except that I still continue to be an Assistant Assessor in Boston, as I have been since 1882.

"I have been busy most of the time, have had no time for literary work, and my journeys have been confined to two or three vacation trips through different parts of the British Provinces, which I enjoyed very much, but which were of no special interest.

"My post-office address is 53 State Street, Boston, where, since June of last year, I have been occupying offices with our class mate, Sibley.

"My second child was born on April 4, 1898, at my country home in Acton, Mass. Its name is Edna Josephine."

Married in 1887: two daughters.

JOHN ALDEN THAYER.

(Worcester, Mass., May 10.) — "Upon reading the last class report, I was somewhat amused to find that my occupation was designated as 'Politics,' although the company among whom I was placed took all the sting out of the classification. It is needless to add that I have not attained the heights which they have reached, nor do I expect I ever shall.

"My term as Clerk of the Central District Court of Worcester expired with 1896, and being a Democrat, although a gold one, I was not reappointed. However, my Republican friends very generally supported me, and the members of a bar which is Republican two to one endorsed me by nearly seventy per cent., while a large number remained neutral on account of party ties. It was especially gratifying to me that I was endorsed by a large majority of those members who were members of the bar at the time of my appointment. Harvard men outside of Worcester interested themselves in my behalf, notably Bishop Lawrence, '71; Sprague, '64; and Meyer and Sprague, '79; but the Harvard man who had the most to do in the matter, Governor Wolcott, '70, did not agree with them; so I returned to the practice of my profession. I am associated with my former assistant clerk, C. B. Perry, with offices in the State Mutual Building, 340 Main Street, Worcester, Mass. I was prevailed upon at the last municipal election to become the target for the Democratic votes for mayor. It sufficeth to say that the target was not seriously damaged.

"I am still a celibate, and am in the category of which Howell speaks, 'It will be as distinguished by and by not to read books as it is now not to write them.' In response to your request for a likeness, I send the enclosed.

"The past five years have been busy ones, and have brought more than their share of sorrow. The first death in our immediate family occurred April 15, 1899, when my father, Eli Thayer, passed away."

Unmarried.

JAMES EAMES THOMAS.

(Boston, Mass., May 7.)—"I am, as in 1895, teaching English in the Boys' English High School, Boston. Have risen to the maximum grade and am now master. I still reside at the Hotel Nottingham, Boston. I am still keeping up the bachelor end of the class. I spend most of my time in connection with my work, and in writing school text books for reputation and little money. At present I have in press the books mentioned in the Bibliographical Record.

"I have held no position of trust since 1895, although I have frequently had to be 'trusted.' I am a member of numerous clubs and societies, masonic, pedagogic and social. I am also a member of the Boston Athletic Association, of which our classmate Smith is now president.

"I have made one very enjoyable trip to Europe in 1896, and expect to go again in 1901."

WASHINGTON BUTCHER THOMAS.

Is Vice President of the American Sugar Refineries Company, and manages the Boston end of the business. Has lately been reëlected President of the National Golf Association.

JOHN JAMES THOMPSON.

Has not been heard from since 1882.

JOSEPH GILBERT THORP.

(May 14.)—"I have very little to add to my report of five years ago. My occupation [law] and residence [Cambridge, Mass.] remain unchanged. I am as interested as ever in social and philanthropic work. My only contribution to the literature on this subject is a report, prepared in coöperation with an excellent commission appointed by Mayor Quincy of Boston in the spring of 1899, of which I was Chairman, on the Penal Aspects of Drunkenness in Suffolk County. We hope our report is a real contribution, and that it will help to secure more rational and humane methods of dealing with this unfortunate class in our and other communities.

"My only journey of interest was a short business trip to England, with Parker of '77, in the winter of 1898. We were a month in London, in February and March, and by means of letters to influential people were put in the way of meeting some of England's great men. It was a great privilege.

"In other respects — apart from certain unexpected successes in golf, over which I am an enthusiast, never traveling without my bag of clubs, and so finding keen pleasure in every city I visit — the data I sent you for the last report will serve for this.

"One more daughter — I am fortunate enough to have five now — was born March 25, 1897. We call her Priscilla Alden — a name to which she is entitled by a very direct line of inheritance.

"I will send you my photograph on my return. It is only an 'amateur photograph,' which you say in your circular 'is all right if you have nothing better.' In fact, it was taken by myself for an illustrated sporting book being prepared by D. Appleton & Co. It was so well regarded by their art critic that he wrote asking me for the address of the artist who had done this exceptionally artistic work, as he desired to get him to photograph his other Boston subjects! I may add that I am an enthusiastic member of the Old Cambridge Photographic Club, which has among its members two ladies who have been successful exhibitors in the London, Paris, New York and Philadelphia salons. From this association I get reflected glory, and so can smile at your apparent lack of information concerning the comparative artistic merit of amateur and professional work."

Married in 1885: five daughters.

HENRY OLIVER UNDERWOOD.

(Boston, May 1.)—"There have been no important changes in my life since 1895, and my own family remains as then — well and happy. I am still pegging away at the same old business, manufacture of canned goods, which has been fairly successful. I have been more or less interested in a few other business enterprises, and have devoted a good deal of time to local town affairs at my home in Belmont. Through overwork and the deaths of my father and mother, my head gave out a year ago, and I have had to take life rather easy until quite recently; but now I am all right again. I have been exceedingly fortunate in not losing a day in business since I left college. The world still continues to use me very kindly."

Has given a public library to the town of Belmont, in memory of his parents.

"I send you a recent photograph."

*HENRY CLARKE WARREN.

Henry Clarke Warren, born in Boston, November 18, 1854, died in Cambridge, January 3, 1899. He was of old Puritan stock; and in his simple but steadfast life showed the spirit of his ancestors.

In his class biography, which is deposited in the College Library, Warren thus narrates the accident of babyhood which affected his whole life: "When two or three years old I tumbled one day out of a carriage (it was, I believe, one of the old-ashioned bobbing chaises) which my mother was driving. I struck on my head and soon after grew hump-backed, and ever since have been excessively delicate and always ailing. Some time after my fall I grew so weak that my life was by many people despaired of. Since then, besides my backache, I have made a trial of dyspepsia and various other ailments." Weakness and ill health thus were Warren's constant companions; and but for his intellectual interests his life would have been monotonously sad.

The direction of his interests showed itself early and always instinctively. His electives in college were Latin, Greek, Sanskrit, Philosophy. I recall my first contact with Warren, in our Sophomore year, when, with Burlingham, we formed a trio appointed by Professor C. L. Smith to work in common on Latin composition.

He was eager in his attention to his work and touchingly grateful for companionship. He chose Sanskrit in his junior year, and that mysterious thing, Post-graduate Sanskrit, in his senior year. In his class life he wrote: "I am most interested in Sanskrit, and it looks now as though I should go to study Sanskrit at the Johns Hopkins University under Professor Charles R. Lanman." This plan he carried out: going to Johns Hopkins immediately after graduation, and there beginning his friendship with Professor Lanman, who afterward, in Cambridge, became his intimate and beloved associate.

Warren's life remained throughout what it was in his undergraduate days: a constant and courageous battling with a stunted body and ill health, relieved by his interest in literature and philology, and above all in his Oriental studies. Fortunate in inheriting substantial means, he was able to get the full measure of solace allowed by his physical infirmities. His warm friendship with Professor Lanman contributed greatly to the happiness he derived from his investigations and publications; and this it was which led him, in 1891, to establish himself in Cambridge, where he lived thereafter. The details of his work in Sanskrit and kindred subjects are of interest chiefly to the specialists in Oriental studies. His work was scholarly and thorough. He contributed to the Journal of the American Oriental Society, and to the Journal of the Pali Text Society; and printed in the Harvard Oriental Series, a volume entitled "Buddhism in Translations." A sympathetic account of his life and work was given in the sketch by Professor Lanman in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine for March, 1899. Another sketch appeared in the Nation of January 5, 1899; and still another, with a bibliography of his writings, in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for April, 1899.

Warren was the most kind-hearted and generous of men; and throughout his life he was doing good deeds unostentatiously, and often without the knowledge even of those whom he aided. He was a generous benefactor to the University. In addition to many gifts for current use, he had made, some years before his death, a gift of the house and land immediately back of the old gymnasium; a most welcome addition to the University property, since the land (fronting on three streets) will become extremely valuable for academic uses in the future, and in private hands might easily have been built upon objectionably. By his will he left to the University the house and land, equally valuable, where he lived (the old Beck House, opposite Beck Hall); an adjoining house and land on Quincy Street; specific bequests of $10,000 for the Dental School; of $10,000 for the Peabody Museum of American Archæology; and of $15,000 for publications in the Sanskrit department; and a final bequest of certain residuary property, which proved to amount to no less a sum than $100,000, for the general support of the Sanskrit department. He also left a sum of $10,000 to his associate in Oriental studies, Professor Lanman — a remembrance of a long association between the two men, the source of much happiness for both, and alike creditable to both.

See Report V., pp. 3, 4, 105.

CHARLES HOOVER WHITING.

(Paris, May 5.) — "At the time of the last class report I was living in Chicago, where I was associated (strange as it may seem) with a Yale man engaged in contract work upon the Chicago Drainage Canal; that work being finished, I spent several months in Galveston, Texas, on other public works.

"I made a trip to Europe in the fall, bringing my family back, my wife's health being restored, practically. After another year in Chicago, I came again to Europe with my family, where I have lived since that time, making only short trips to America. My home is in Paris, No. 42 Avenue Henri Martin. During most of last year I was engaged in Belgium in the construction of the largest dredging plant ever built, which was delivered to the Russian Government in the fall, after doing phenomenal work for the Belgian Government on the River Scheldt.

"I enjoyed my trip to Russia immensely, as well as the work in Belgium. At present I devote most of my time to the automobile industry.

"I still retain my membership in the Chicago Athletic Club, and am a member of the Automobile Club of France."

Married in 1883: one daughter.

RICHARD THOMAS WILTON.

(East Derry, N. H., June 7.) — "As pastor of The First Church, East Derry, N. H., I attended our June conference last Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5th and 6th. I returned Wednesday evening to find your third notice asking me for 'an account of my doings,' for a sixth class report.

"Circumstances beyond my control have prevented my writing until to-day; and I trust my late letter will be on time. The picture enclosed is the best I can do for you.

"My special work in Wolfeboro, N. H., next to the routine business of the parish, was a call to raise money to build a new church. The new church did not materialize, although we did succeed in buying the house and lot adjoining the church, at a cost of $5,000. During my pastorate in Wolfeboro, N. H., I was chosen to preach the Conference Sermon at Milton, N. H., for the Strafford County Conference of Congregational Churches, and, after my resignation, I preached the Ordination Sermon for the Rev. Chas. Watbie, July 1, 1896.

"Feeling the need of rest, I went north to Lancaster, N. H., to recuperate. Toward the end of September word came that our son Herbert W., who was visiting his aunt in Lanesville, Gloucester, Mass., was stricken with diphtheria. His mother went to him at once, and I followed as soon as possible. He had a strong constitution; but after fighting that fell disease from the last of September to the seventeenth of October, 1896, he died suddenly, in the eleventh year of his age, of paralysis of the heart, the result of diphtheria. The Lanesville physician who attended him did not use anti-toxin. My wife contracted the disease and came to death's door. Then the scourge broke out in Wolfeboro, N. H. My only living daughter, E. Gladys, and two of her brothers, Wilfrid and Stanley, were taken ill together. We had the anti-toxin injected, though the two boys were given up by four of the Wolfeboro doctors. In my desperate eagerness to get the peroxide of hydrogen to the seat of trouble in their throats, I took the disease; and as soon as my condition was pronounced by the head doctor to be caused by diphtheria I had the anti-toxin injected at once. We are not as well as we were previous to the diphtheria attack. Personally, I was unable to preach for several weeks.

"I had received a call to a church in Lyman, Me. The parish was small, but my strength was unequal to the strain of preaching until January 1, 1897. Even then I felt obliged to board there thirteen weeks before I had strength sufficient for the work of moving my family and goods into the parsonage.

"During my stay in Lyman, Me., I preached the Conference Sermon, October 13, 1897, before the York County Conference of Congregational Churches, at Sanford, Me. Another call had come meanwhile, and, as there were plenty of men to do such work as that of my Lyman charge, I accepted the call to East Derry, N. H., where I am to-day.

"My work here began in November, 1897. We have lifted a parish debt of $1,000 since that date; and now we are engaged in raising funds to repair the parish buildings. Shortly after coming here I was appointed one of the visiting committee of Pinkerton Academy at Derry village. At the annual school meeting of Derry, March 17th, last, I was elected a member of the Derry Town School Board for the ensuing three years, by a practically unanimous vote. On May 30th, last, I delivered the Memorial Day Oration in the town hall, Derry, before the Geo. Upton Post, No. 45, G. A. R.

"My pastoral affairs, my school work, and the incidentals of a clergyman's life used up all my energy. I shall never be as strong again as I was before the diphtheria claimed me as its victim. But my Anglo-Saxon blood, despite diphtheria and la grippe, will keep me hanging on to my duty as long as hanging on is of any use.

"'The Lord keep you humble and we will keep you poor' is the parish principle here, as in the home missionary fields of my earlier ministry. Still I keep on fighting the good fight of faith.

"On Tuesday morning, June 5, 1900, I left East Derry, N. H., for Exeter, N. H., to attend the two days' session of the Rockingham County Conference of Congregational and Presbyterian churches, held at the Phillips Congregational Church, Exeter. My oldest son, R. Cline, went with me as a delegate from my East Derry Church, of which he is a member. We were entertained at the home of Harlem Page Amen, '79, Principal of Phillips Academy, Exeter. Owing to the kindness of our classmate, Principal Amen, I had a very pleasant and interesting two days' visit in Exeter. Robinson Seminary for young ladies and Phillips Academy, Exeter, are splendid schools. Wednesday morning, June 6th, I led the devotional exercises in the Phillips Academy Chapel, familiar to so many Harvard men. There I witnessed the loyalty of the students to their chief. The very first sentence he uttered before prayers brought forth spontaneous applause; and when he stated that the Rev. R. T. Wilton, of East Derry, N. H., an old Harvard '79 classmate, would lead their devotions, they enthusiastically applauded him again. I am heartily glad to have been a witness of his success; and I wish him, and you, dear secretary, and all the men of '79, continued prosperity. With this sentiment I must stop."

Married in 1880: three sons, one daughter.

JOHN ELIOT WOLFF.

JAMES ANDERSON WRIGHT.

(New York, June 4.)—"In reply to your circular note of inquiry regarding members of the Class of 1879, I have nothing of any importance to report. My occupation [Second Vice President International Navigation Company,— Red Star Line] and residence remain unchanged, and I can report no additions to my family.

"I have done no work of a literary character, nor have I had any experiences or made any journeys of any particular interest. My business remains the same: it occupies my time very fully, and usually requires me to make a trip to Europe each year.

"I am sorry I have nothing of interest, nor even a photograph, to send you."

Married in 1888: one daughter.

[Received too late for insertion in its proper place.]

GEORGE FREDERICK COOK.

(West Harwich, Mass., July 14.) — "Illness and rather hard luck has been my lot since 1895, and I am now taking a rest at this quiet Cape Cod village and expect to remain here till October. I shall then go back to work, but where I do not yet know. I shall probably return to newspaper work, which I have followed since 1884.

"From 1885 to 1889 I was Postmaster at Breckenridge, Minn., as well as editor of a county newspaper. In 1890 I began daily newspaper work on the St. Paul Pioneer Press, as reporter. From there I went to Duluth, Minn., where I spent three years, being the greater part of that period city editor of the News-Tribune. After a siege of daily newspaper work at Sheboygan, Wis., as owner of a paper, I went to Milwaukee in 1894, where I reported for the Daily News four years. In 1895, however, I was taken ill and had to rusticate a year. I left Milwaukee for Denver, Col., owing to sickness of both self and wife, and from there went to Boulder, Col., where I engaged in the stationery and newspaper business. This summer I returned to Boston.

"That is my history in a nutshell. I shall never return to the West. I will give you my permanent address later."

Married in 1883: no children.

Am a member of the Buffalo Club, Saturn Club, Liberal Club, and University Club of New York, and President of the Independent Club and the Niagara Golf Club.

"I keep very busy; am beginning to appreciate how little I have traveled about, and how much I would like to renew old Cambridge friendships."

BENJAMIN SEAVER BLANCHARD.

(Brookline, Mass., May 17.) — "I am still practicing medicine in Brookline, Mass., and manage to take care of my family and save a little each year to help me out in my old age. I have made no journeys of any account, and know of nothing to write about of any particular interest to any one in the class."

Married in 1887: three sons, one daughter.

CLIFFORD BRIGHAM.

(Boston, May 7.)—"My occupation and residence are the same as last reported. Offices at 10 Tremont Street, Boston, and Salem, Mass., and living at Salem.

"My residence is 292 Amity Street, Flushing, L. I. I was married in 1884, and have one child, born in the following year."

FREDERICK EMERSON CHANDLER.

(Boston, April 22.)—"Not married since last report. Prospects of remaining unmarried are unusually favorable.

"Literary work, only in connection with my position as Foreign Exchange Editor of the Philadelphia Medical Times, in 1895–96, when I translated Dr. Pouillet's work, 'L' Onanisme Chez la Femme,' also Prof. B. Ball's book, 'La Folie Erotique.' A rather important article on 'Empyema' from the Russian Archives of Pathology, and another on 'Diseases of the Supra Renal Capsules,' from the Norse Medical Archives, will, perhaps, stand out from the hack-work done during those two years.

"Since 1895 I have joined the Bostonian Society, the New England Historical Genealogical Society, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the General Society of the War of 1812, the Knights of Malta and its appendant order the 'Great Cross,' being a charter member of King Solomon Priory, No. 2, where I was first High Priest, then Prior, and was finally kicked out as Supreme Prior of the Order.

"Only college degree has been an M. D. from Tufts' Medical School in 1895.

"I have made no journeys, except 'per trolley,' but I think I have covered every mile of trolley road in Massachusetts east of Worcester, without meeting either shipwreck or cyclone."

PICKERING DODGE.

(Washington, D. C., April 19.)—"Your appeal for news was received just four minutes ago, and here is the answer.

"Present occupation, as in 1895, Chief Clerk in the Office of the Washington Aqueduct. Residence, Falls Church, Va., where we moved in June, 1899, to spend the summer. We liked the place so much that we bought a lot and built a house. Shall probably spend three winter months in Washington. Married, on November 12, 1895, to Harriet Elizabeth (Havenner) McEwen of Washington. Her father's name was John Havenner and her mother's Anna (Cooper)

Havenner. Children, one, Elizabeth Pickering, born patriotically on July 4, 1897, at Washington, D. C.

"No especial interests save our interest in the village life we are leading. I am Vice President of the Village Improvement Society and President of the Falls Church Library Association. I am, as formerly, Treasurer of the Harvard Club of Washington.

"My literary work has consisted in editing a quarterly magazine called 'Ex Libris,' devoted to the study of American bookplates, which flourished for one year and then died for lack of contributed material. It was published by the American Ex Libris Society, of which I was President."

CHARLES DRIVER.

(Boston, April 28.)—"Nothing new since last report."
Treasurer of the Boston Couch Bed Co.
Married in 1884: no children.

GEORGE HOWARD EARLE, JR.

(Philadelphia, June 9.) — "Your valuation of 'Temporary Members' is not very tempting to one of the least of them, to trouble you with many details. But your heading, 'Third Notice,' after the threat of only sending one, so mollifies me, that I am going to send you a few lines.

"Without troubling you with detail, I am at present President of the Pennsylvania Warehousing and Safe Deposit Company, of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, of the Tradesmen's National Bank, of the Market Street National Bank, and of the South Chester Tube Works. I have also been Vice President of the Guarantee Trust and Safe Deposit Company, and was a member of the Olcott-Earle Committee, that, with Mr. Morgan, reorganized the Reading Railroad, as well as Chairman of the Choctaw Coal and Railroad Company Reorganization Committee. I am a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, of the Mayflower Society, of the Sons of the Revolution, and too many other things to think or write about.

"I live, during the summer, either at my country seat, near Radnor Hunt, or at my camp, on Upper St. Regis Lake, in the Adirondack Mountains. In the winter I have a house at 1714 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. I have had ten children, of whom nine survive, and, as you know, married Catharine Hansel French, the sister of a classmate, who was also a 'Temporary Member.' I forgot to say that I am a member of the Philadelphia Bar, and practiced law for twelve years, and am generally the busiest and tiredest man you know. I fill in my leisure moments by being the Receiver of the Chestnut Street National Bank, as well as the Assignee of the Chestnut Street Trust Company, and am in control of the largest newspaper in Philadelphia, to wit: The Philadelphia Record.

"In view of all these afflictions I trust that you will think the photograph, which I send you under a separate cover, proves that I wear moderately well."

ALFRED ELA.

(Boston, July 9.) — "From 1878 to 1882 (inclusive) was manufacturing wood turnings at Cambridgeport. Since 1883 have been in fire insurance business in Boston, and recently have added city and factory real estate. Address, 54 Kilby Street, Boston; residence is Manchester, N. H.

"Printed matter has been merely ephemeral, largely upon humorous aspects of the law. Have had no photograph taken since 1878, but am told my appearance is about the same as then.

"Have acquired neither wife, wealth nor wisdom; but I come of a long-lived strain, and still hope."

HENRY BANKS FRENCH.

(Philadelphia, May 10.) — "Wholesale Druggist; business address, 429, 435 Arch Street, Philadelphia; winter home address, 1502 Spruce Street. Member of Board of Managers of Municipal League; Chairman of Committee for Abolition of the Public Buildings Commission; member of Union Committee for Revision of Ballot Laws and Extension of Merit System; member of University, Art, Church, Merion, Radnor Hunt, Batchelor's Barge clubs."

Married in 1883: two sons, two daughters.

JOSEPH THOMAS GILBERT.

(Boston, June 20.) — "When I come to look back on the past five years I can hardly point out exactly what I have been doing, but I know that my time has been much occupied in various ways.

"I have every season made one or two trips to Juneau, Alaska, where I have been involved in some mining litigation, which last year terminated completely in my favor. If, in the future, the property turns out as well as the litigation I shall be much pleased. A year ago I gave up my residence in Milwaukee, Wis., transferring it to Gilbertsville, New York, where I have had a summer home for a number of years. I am much interested in this little village and have devoted much time and thought to its welfare. I have taken an apartment in Boston, at the Tudor, corner of Beacon and Joy streets, where I intend to spend my winters. My permanent address is Gilbertsville, Otsego County, New York.

"I went three days since to a Boston photographer and yesterday got my proofs. All of them are simply execrable. I send you one taken at Tacoma about three years ago, which I think is fairly good."

Unmarried.

HAROLD GOULD HENDERSON.

[From this year's '80 Class Report.]

"My law practice I was compelled by ill health to give up some years ago. For the past five years I have been traveling in Europe, only returning to America late last autumn. While abroad we spent every winter in Dresden, and the spring either in England or Italy. By a great stroke of luck I was asked to fish on a salmon river in Norway the first summer we were abroad, with the result that the four succeeding summers were partially spent in the same way.

"In Dresden, in 1896, my second boy, Francis Tracy Henderson, was born, so that I now have two boys, the elder, Harold, Jr., nearly eleven, and the younger nearly four.

"Our permanent residence will hereafter be at 953 Madison Avenue, New York, though the house will not be ready for us until the autumn.

"My clubs are still the Century, Players and St. Anthony."

Married in 1889: two sons.

MAHLON HUTCHINSON.

(Washington, D. C., June 12.) — "Residence, Washington, D. C.; occupation, physician. At present, and for the past two years, have been devoting all my time to experiments in hydrocarbon oils and fuel-oil burners for the United States Navy, and am now adapting the burners for use on the torpedo boat 'Talbot,' at the Brooklyn Navy Yard."

Married in 1883: no children.

FRANCIS BOWLER KEENE.

(Milwaukee, Wis., June 10.)—"Since 1895 I have continued to reside in Milwaukee, and have made no expeditions of any note. A nursery is a great sheet-anchor. Our second child, Caroline Williams Keene, was born February 18, 1898, and I commend her and her sister to the future attention of discriminating scions of '79.

"I have continued to give much of my time to newspaper work. During the past few years I have given some attention to golf verse, and have been dubbed 'the poet laureate of the links.' One of these days I shall publish the collection in book form.

"Since the last report I have entered the political field and am a member of the Wisconsin Legislature, having been elected in November, 1898. I represent the first district of Milwaukee County. This is a peculiar district, and getting elected in it means a hustling campaign. It is the heaviest business and banking district in Wisconsin, has the finest residence section of Milwaukee, its people comprise the best and the worst, the enlightened and the ignorant and vicious. Besides what are commonly called Americans, my constituents include Germans, Poles, Italians, Russian Jews, Greeks, Syrians, Armenians, etc., with one section dominated by Irish, and every mother's son a politician. It is a well-irrigated district,—some 200 saloons. The man who gets elected in this delectable district is very apt, like the darkey, to die of 'de Brightness of de kidneys.' But my flues are long, and my head cool. To have married a Kentucky girl was a great point in my favor. It established my brand, my trade mark. Being able to converse in the Dago lingo with my friend Signor Peanutta, in Arabic with my Orientals, in German with my Teutonic friends, I enjoy a certain intimacy that a man less polyglot would not have. Having kissed the Blarney stone in 1876, I get on famously with the rulers of 'The Bloody Third.' But it is a strenuous life about election time. For a Republican, whose spinal column is red, white and blue, to get elected in a Democratic district and fight shy of alien and race prejudices is no easy matter. But I enjoy it. So between politics and the pen, which are my work, and golf, which is my recreation, I am busy.

"My clubs are the Milwaukee, Country, Press, Harvard, University (of Chicago), and I belong to the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, and have for several years been Historian of the Wisconsin Society Sons of the American Revolution. I am a Trustee of Milwaukee Downer College (female).

"My residence is 301 Ogden Avenue, Milwaukee."

Married in 1893: two daughters.

ANTON LEISTER.

(Medina, Ohio, June 8.) — "Present occupation, etc.: Ditching, sheepshearing, farmwork, reading, writing, study. Changes in occupation — from activity to inactivity, through sickness, in 1898–99. In residence — from a rented house to a 12 x 16 'very own' cabin.

"Magazine articles are, 'Aids in Composition,' or the like, in Editor (Franklin, O.), 1898; 'Summer Hygiene on the Farm,' in Good Health (Battle Creek, Mich.), July, 1900. The rest is all newspaper work, chiefly agricultural.

"Items of interest — Could write much that would be of interest to me from others; but from majority of past class reports I judge that the class prefers the simple, unimpassioned 'catalogue style' to any account that would show what the man is rather than what he does.

"Degrees — Degree of S. R., 'Sane and Responsible,' by Medina County Probate Court, in July, 1895, after trial for 'alleged insanity'; also minor degree of F. W., 'Fighter from Wayback,' by Judge Richards of same court, in conversation recently.

"Three-mile trips to work at 4 to 5 A. M., and from work at 8 to 9 P. M., varied now and then by a nine-mile trip at 3 to 5 A. M. before beginning the day's work. Dates: November, 1899; May, 1900."

Unmarried.

JONAS MICHAEL MILES.

(Boston, April 20.) — Withdrew from his partnership with C. W. Thompson & Co., music dealers and publishers, August 1, 1898, and opened an office as attorney and counselor-at-law in the Rogers Building, 209 Washington Street, Boston.

Married in 1883: one son.

JOHN SINGLETON MITCHELL.

(Brookline, May 29.) — "Since your last report nothing of very special importance has occured to me beyond the change of address as given above. I have now been a resident of the town of Brookline since April, 1893.

"I am still occupied in the practice of medicine, and have been Assistant Surgeon at the Cushing Hospital in Roxbury. This hospital was founded, and is owned, by Dr. Ernest W. Cushing, Professor of Gynecology at the Tufts Medical School, Boston. It is a private institution, and is located on Parker Hill, Roxbury, and is contiguous to the Woman's Charity Club Hospital (in which Conant is a member of the staff) and the Boston Baptist Hospital.

"I have not yet entered into matrimony, nor have I aspired to any political honors or offices, believing that a medical man should not combine politics with medicine.

"I have written no articles or papers for publication, but have been a member of the Boston Congregational Club, of the Harvard Church Brotherhood of Brookline, and am a member of a club of ladies and gentlemen attending the Harvard Church, and who have frequent social gatherings at members' houses."

EDWARD LELAND MORSE.

(Chicago, Ill., June —.)—"I have found teaching an extremely fascinating subject, and have kept my position as Principal of the Phil Sheridan School. There are people in that business whom it is not pleasant to meet, and there are Board Members whom I have succeeded in not knowing, but it is one of the joys of my life to meet my twelve hundred little friends at school every day. Unfortunately, I do not have time to teach so much as I should prefer.

"The leisure time incident to public-school teaching I have employed in various ways. For three years I devoted my afternoons and evenings to the study of law at the Law School of the Lake Forest University, and succeeded in getting a degree and a fairly meager knowledge of that soul-filling subject. Being satisfied with the theory rather than the practice thereof in Chicago, I next acquired the habit of taking advantage of John D. Rockefeller's munificence at the University of Chicago. I took a long pull at international law, anthropology, history, sociology, political economy and political science. I went into the laboratory and toyed with the elements, escaping miraculously. I pawed over mica and schists, shales and other things; I witnessed eye-opening experiments in a darkened room of the Physical Laboratory — all the while taking notes briskly. I then quit and rested, until I saw a course advertised in Don Quijote by one ———, Ph. D. (made in Germany). He was a peach! Years agone, in the hoary antiquity of my youth, I had heard Lowell conduct a recitation in Don Quijote up in that little cubby-hole in the top story of the University, southwest corner. The light was poor, the benches were primitive, and, I think, the rafters came down low in the ceiling. One of us fellows being called upon, translated a few lines, and Lowell took up the subject and recited the whole hour, while we listened. It was no recitation in the strict pedagogic sense of the word: it was a monologue by James Russell Lowell, and, as such, was the most delightful inspiration at first hand in literature I had ever dreamed of. It started off on Cervantes and wound up anywhere. Not an allusion, not an innuendo, not a shade of irony, not a felicity or infelicity of the author escaped Lowell. And as we left that room, fashioned in the rude style of our colonial forefathers, and came out into the gathering dusk of twilight, with Lowell's peculiarly winning bass tones in our ears, we felt, or I did at least, that for one short hour I had lived. But with Bre'r ——— it was different. Learned, painfully learned, Germanly learned! Etymology and philology until one could not rest. It was positively cruel to trace up a poor, unoffending Spanish word through all its Catalonian, Roumanian, Andalusian congenitors, never resting until run to earth in Etruscan or Sanskrit. All the exquisite byplay between Don and Sancho — lost. The vivid flashes of common sense interlarded in Quijote's rodomontade — lost. 'Es mejor no menearlo, Sancho' — lost. Hours spent in elaborate refutation of what was clearly meant by Cervantes as sarcasm. Disquisition on disquisition to prove dates, when the whole thing, like Shakespeare, had no dates. Finally, came a statement that Quijote and Sancho left a certain place por una puerta falsa. Now, Herr Von Dummesel had made an elaborate calculation that, according to astronomical data, it was on such and such a day of a certain year, but the gentleman was wrong, and to-morrow we will present proofs to the contrary. Well, that to-morrow, so far as I was concerned, never came: I left it a Spanish mañana: it never came. I quit.

"Years ago I kept a sailing canoe on the Calumet River — one of the kind to navigate successfully you have to part your hair in the middle; but in due time the river was docked, and I gave up canoe and boat house. I then bought a bronco at the Stock Yards, virgin as to saddle and bridle, and, to the edification of the town, rode her regularly. In training her for jumping, she injured a leg and I had to shoot her. Later, I bought a wheel and rode my century — once only. Last summer a '76 man and I started from here for Montreal, but hearing lugubrious reports of roads when we arrived at Toronto, we turned back. No scorching, — we rested at every spring or pellucid brook and accepted every umbrageous invitation for repose, getting acquainted with every man, woman and child on the road. A gentleman's promenade.

"During the past year I have amused myself with trying to raise a certain kind of chickens in my suburban place near Chicago, a pastime in which I have been aided and abetted by a former overseer of Harvard. This summer I have agreed to inflict on the Cuban teachers at Harvard certain stereopticon tortures in Spanish.

"On the 27th of April, 1897, I was married to Louisa Penn Norton, and have no children. I have written a few little things for the press, mainly on education; but I do not consider them of any importance."

GEORGE OSGOOD.

(Kensington, N. H., May 30.) — "I am still farming in Kensington, N. H., the same as I have been since the fall of 1877. My uncle, Rev. George Osgood, died the past year, and I am at present living alone."

Unmarried.

WILLIAM CARROLL PRICE.

(Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 24.) — "I am still engaged in the practice of law in the City of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Am unmarried.

"Outside of my profession, about the only work I have indulged in has been in connection with the National Guard of our State; holding various offices in the same until I became Colonel of the 9th Regiment, located in our city and vicinity. I resigned my commission as colonel in the spring of 1897, after my return from California, where I had spent the winter, by the advice of my physician, to recuperate from overwork."

JULIAN WAINWRIGHT ROBBINS.

(New York, April 19.) — "Since 1895, with the exception of several brief holidays in Europe, with the usual inspection of picture galleries, etc., I have done nothing of interest. He who must perforce labor in wicked Wall Street is little likely to be either a contributor to magazines or an author of books."

Is a member of the firm of George Leask & Co., bankers, 35 Wall Street.

Married in 1889: two daughters.

FRANCIS HATHAWAY STONE.

(New Bedford, Mass., April 23.)—"Living in New Bedford. No active business. No children since last report."

Married in 1887: one son.

GEORGE WILKINSON STORM.

(Newark, N. J., April 25.) — "Answering your circular letter of April 16th, would say, I have nothing of interest to the class of '79 to write, my life being simply that of an ordinary business man. Since you last heard from me, I have been steadily in business in Newark, N. J. [The Storm Manufacturing Company, freight and passenger elevators and dumb waiters.]

"As to traveling, have traveled very extensively over the United States and a little in Europe. Belong to three or four social clubs, and that is about all.

"Have no deaths, marriages or births in my family to report. My oldest daughter is a member of the class of 1902 at Wellesley College. As requested, I enclose photograph.

"Although I feel as well and as young as I did in the days long gone by when I joined the class of 1879 in Harvard College, still the many gray hairs in my beard tell me I am growing old."

Married in 1879: two daughters.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE WATSON.

(Utica, N. Y., April 19.) — "Have been in the general real estate business, at 240 Genesee Street, Utica, N. Y., since 1895."

Married in 1887: one daughter.

JOHN HOWARD WILLARD.

(Lexington, Mass., May 8.)—"Occupation and residence the same as previously given. Five years of added age since writing my last report, the change being especially noticeable in the children, who are fast attaining womanhood. My oldest daughter is at Radcliffe, the other two are at home.

"No extended journeys were taken the past five years. Last summer considerable time was devoted by my family and myself to yachting.

"I send herewith the photograph, as requested. It is an amateur photograph, taken a few days ago by my daughter Hélène."

Married in 1880: three daughters.
